Estate Taxes Deduction Has Heil Approval

Provides Exemption for
U. S. Levies in Com-

16 BILLS SIGNED

Pension Plan for School Employees Other Than Teachers Is Vetoed

Madison.—(AP)—The governor's office announced today Governor Heil had signed into law a bill authorizing the deduction of federal inheritance levy; had vetoed one measure, and approved 15 others.

The tax bill, introduced by Senator Bolens (D) Port Washington, was passed by the senate, 19 to 11, and concurred in by the assembly 53 to 37.

The veto stamp was placed upon a bill allowing cities to establish pension systems for school employees other than teachers. It was introduced by Senator Paulson (P) LaCrosse.

In a brief message Governor Heil said he did not "feel the pension system established in the state was ever intended to be extended to employees as a general class. As now in effect it applies to persons engaged in the teaching profession."

Against Special Fertilizer

"Extending the law to all school employees is not justified unless it is extended to all classes of employees. In my opinion school employees are in no different position than employees in any other field of work and a pension system for this special class cannot be justified."

Other measures written into law: Exemption of those who use gasoline for industrial purposes from paying the gasoline tax. Wholesalers must file monthly reports with the state treasurer.

Requiring the marking of birds or animals taken from licensed game farms.

Providing that county of legal residence must care for dependent children of war veterans who are hospitalized or institutionalized in another county.

Permitting town mutual fire insurance companies having $10,000,000 or more insurance in force and $25,000 cash reserve for each $1,000,000 in insurance to offer extended coverage for damage by collision, riot, civil commotion, explosion, and fire.

Madison.—(AP)—The state supreme court has reserved the right to pass upon the legal fairness of any back pay orders that may be issued in labor dispute cases involving the discharge of employees.

The court yesterday reaffirmed its ruling that the state labor relations board created under the law of 1937 which was repealed by the 1939 legislature, had acted unfairly in directing the Folding Furniture works of Stevens Point to give back pay to 32 discharged workers from the time of their dismissal.

The court said in the original decision that the back pay, estimated by company officials at around $100,000 was excessive. It refused to sustain the old board in this respect but upheld its finding that the company was guilty of unfair labor practices and that the discharged workers should be reinstated.

A motion by the attorney general's office for rehearing on the back pay issue was denied by the court. The tribunal said it would be futile to send the case back for further consideration because the board which issued the order had been legislated out of existence and replaced by a new agency known as the employment relations board.

"If we have occasion in the future to reverse orders of the new board respecting back pay we can then enter such mandates as we deem proper," the justices said.

CIO Union Plans New
'Little Steel' Drive

Pittsburgh.—(AP)—Third anniversary of the unionization campaign by the CIO Steel Workers' Organizing committee today brought an announcement of plans for another drive in the "Little Steel" mills where strikes and disorders flared two years ago.

Chairman Philip Murray, already claiming agreements with 555 steel manufacturing, fabricating and processing firms representing about 75 per cent of the industry, said the new drive probably would be mapped out at a conference of regional directors opening July 24 at Chicago.

Despite the strikes in the summer of 1937, S.W.O.C. failed to win labor contracts from four "Little Steel" companies—Bethlehem, Inland, Youngstown Sheet and Tube and Republic.

Pierce Park Celebration Will Highlight Appleton's Fourth;
Johns and McCarthy to Speak

Appleton Junior Chamber of Commerce officials today predicted that the largest crowds ever to attend the Jaces' Fourth of July celebration will jam Pierce park Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday.

Although the midway will be open this evening and free acts are scheduled, the celebration starts officially tomorrow.

Joseph McCarthy, Shawano, circuit judge-elect, will speak at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon from the park stage and Congressman Joshua Johns at the same time Tuesday afternoon. Milburn Reitz, Appleton High school oratorical champion, will deliver an Independence day oration at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

About a dozen acts will be presented, free of charge, to the celebration participants. Acts will be shown at 3:30 in the afternoon and 8 o'clock in the evening on each of the three days.

Fred Boughton, jace member and chairman of the state hero's award committee, reported this morning that the Appleton organization will award a medal to an Appleton youth at ceremonies Tuesday afternoon. Congressman Johns will make the presentation, preceding his talk.

The youth who will be honored is Robert Dorschner, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dorschner, 840 W. 1st avenue, Grand Chute. Last April he pulled a playmate, David Velle, age 24, from an abandoned cellar excavation which

Leche Is Asked For Additional Data on Smith

Former Governor Re-

of Disappearance

OTHERS INDICTED

Mrs. Smith, 2 Relatives
And Broker Named
By Grand Jury

Baton Rouge, La.—(AP)—Increased demand was made upon former Governor Richard W. Leche today to explain certain phases of the disappearance of fugitive Dr. James Monroe Smith, now under indictment for embezzlement of funds from the state university which he once headed.

Dr. Smith's wife, two relatives and a broker also were indicted yesterday by the parish grand jury investigating financial "irregularities" at the school.

The missing educator, last reported seen near Toronto, Canada, was indicted for embezzlement of $100,000 of university funds. Mrs. Smith, her nephew, J. Emory Adams and the Smith's son-in-law, Owen W. Ware were charged with "aiding and abetting in the embezzlement."

Against J. M. Brown, the intermediary in market speculations for which Smith used more than half-a-million dollars of university bonds as collateral, the charge was "assisting the principal offender."

Paper Asks Questions

Meanwhile, the New Orleans Times-Picayune urging a thorough investigation of the university's muddled affairs, asked these front-page questions:

"Why was former Governor Leche's announcement of Dr. Smith's resignation delayed several hours? What information that he did not already possess did former Governor Leche receive between the hours of Dr. Smith's resignation and the announcement of his disappearance to justify the order for his arrest? Why, if Governor Leche had knowledge several months ago of irregularities at Louisiana State university did he not detain Mr. Smith when he called at the executive mansion to tender his resignation?"

The former governor who resigned last Monday night—24 hours after Dr. Smith—said he had suspected irregularities at the school since January and had put in an auditing system.

Famed Kidnaping
May Cause Suit

Arizona Carpenter, Identified as Charley Ross, Seeks Part of Fund

Phoenix, Ariz.—(AP)—The sixty-first anniversary of the famed Charley Ross kidnaping today offered the prospect of a titanic legal battle between his brother, Walter, and a wizened Phoenix carpenter over a reputed $468,000 Ross family trust fund.

The carpenter, long known as Gustave Blair, was depicted as abducted Charley Ross by Arizona courts May 8.

On July 1, 1874, Walter, then 6, and Charley, 4, were enticed from their Germantown, Pa., home by abductors who promised them fireworks. Walter was released after a few hours but though Charley's father, Christian Ross, spent a fortune and a lifetime of effort, he never against saw Charley.

The Arizona-acclaimed Charley Ross has foregone all hope of being taken into the Ross family. He has seen only one of the family since he began to seek legal recognition in 1935. Then, he asserted, he went to Philadelphia at Walter's request to present evidence which would substantiate his claims.

Walter, he said, refused to see him.

His recognition by Arizona courts, he contended, caused him to decide that if the family could not be brought amicably to his side he would file a federal court action in Philadelphia looking toward the ultimate sharing in a reputed trust fund left to the children of Christian and Sarah Ann Ross. He is en route to Pennsylvania a now.

Oregon Project Must Be Completed Before
Others are Launched

Madison.—(AP)—The board of control announced today it would recommend no further additions to land or property of state institutions until the industrial school for girls near Oregon has been completed.

"The board believes it is absolutely necessary that this institution be completed and put into operation before consideration is given any other major capital project, as the incomplete institution at Oregon representing an investment of two-thirds of a million dollars and costing a large sum of money each year for maintenance, is an economic loss to the state," the statement declared.

Erection of the industrial school buildings on a 405-acre farm 10 miles south of Madison was authorized by the legislature at a special session in 1928 following defeat of similar proposals at two previous regular sessions.

Ten cottages and a power house were built on the site, but have stood vacant since 1932 because of lack of funds with which other facilities needed for occupancy could be provided. Delegations of social workers frequently have appealed to governors and legislatures for additional appropriations.

Roosevelt Forces Renew Fight for Monetary Powers

Relief Bill Signature Assures Jobs for WPA Workers

MEASURE REVISED

Roosevelt Not Satisfied
With Many Features,
He Says

Washington.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's pre-midnight signature of the $1,755,600,000 relief bill gave assurance today that 2,000,000 WPA workers would have jobs during the next 12 months.

The relief measure, which underwent drastic revision in parliamentary pulling and hauling between the house and the senate, was approved finally late yesterday and signed by the chief executive shortly before the new fiscal year started.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed dissatisfaction with many features of the bill, but said he obviously could not withhold his approval "and thereby stop work relief for the needy unemployed."

In a statement, the president said the bill "contains a number of provisions which will work definite hardship and inequality on more than 2,000,000 American citizens—people who through no fault of their own are in dire need."

Operations Halted

Relief officials, fearful that the new appropriation would not be enacted before last midnight, had halted all operations until Wednesday. They estimated that the bill would provide an average of 2,000,000 jobs monthly, compared with an average of almost 500,000 during the last year.

Mr. Roosevelt mentioned four specific objections to the bill:

1. A requirement that security wages in different localities shall vary no more than is justified by differences in cost of living, but that the current national average shall be maintained. This, Mr. Roosevelt said, probably would impose a reduction in the north and west and an increase in the south.

2. A requirement that security wages in different localities shall vary no more than is justified by differences in cost of living, but that the current national average shall be maintained. This, Mr. Roosevelt said, probably would impose a reduction in the north and west and an increase in the south.

3. A limit on administrative costs to 3.4 per cent. Mr. Roosevelt said that although the figure is about the present overhead, the cut in the total expenditure would raise it on a percentage basis if equal efficiency were maintained.

4. Abolition of the federal theater, which he said "singles out a special group of professional people for a denial of work in their own profession."

At the capitol, House Speaker Bankhead told his press conference he was "very apprehensive" of the possible foreign repercussions to the house refusal to repeal the arms embargo provision of the present law.

"I believe this action of the house has been keenly observed by some of the government abroad which might be classed as trouble-makers," he said, "and I fear they might draw the conclusion that there was a lack of concerted action between the executive and legislative branches of the government on this question of foreign policy."

He said the next few days might bear out this apprehension.

Questioned whether he thought such a conclusion would be warranted, the speaker, who previously

Buckner Planning
To Appeal Verdict

Found Guilty With Two Others in Philippine Railway Bonds Case

New York.—(AP)—Attorneys for William P. Buckner, Jr., wisecracking playboy promoter, and two co-defendants, said today they would appeal their conviction on charges of defrauding Philippine railway bondholders.

A federal court jury took less than three hours yesterday to find Buckner and William J. Gillespie, a broker, guilty on seven counts of mail fraud and one of conspiracy.

The jury also convicted Felipe Buencamino, Philippine legislator, of conspiracy, acquitted him of mail fraud and freed two other defendants—Captain John Stuart Hyde, former British army officer, and C. W. Turner, a broker.

Buckner, 32-year-old nephew of Thomas A. Buckner, chairman of the board of the New York Life Insurance company, and Gillespie, a broker, were indicted June 30, 1937, on charges of defrauding Philippine railway bondholders.

At a preliminary hearing Wednesday, in which he was bound over for trial on bond of $5,000, Yencher denied any connection with the attempt.

Hammer said Yencher, a fugitive from the Winnebago State hospital, gave no reason for the act.

Juneau, Wis.—(AP)—Sheriff Harold Hammer disclosed yesterday that Steve Yencher, 45, had confessed he had attempted to wreck the Milwaukee Road Olympian near Resolute Wednesday.

At a preliminary hearing Wednesday, in which he was bound over for trial on bond of $5,000, Yencher denied any connection with the attempt.

Hammer said Yencher, a fugitive from the Winnebago State hospital, gave no reason for the act.

Filibuster Bars Action but Vote Is Due Wednesday

DOUBLE DEFEAT

House Action on Neutrality Bill Blow to Administration

Washington.—(AP)—A rip-roaring senate Republican filibuster swept away President Roosevelt's dollar devaluation powers early today, but Democratic leaders obtained an agreement for a showdown vote Wednesday on restoring them.

Over in the house, at another late night session a rebellious bloc of Republicans and Democrats had passed a short time previously a neutrality bill distasteful to the administration.

The stunning double defeat—perhaps only temporary on the money issue—threw administration forces into a state of bewilderment.

They predicted ultimate victory on the devaluation question, but were highly doubtful that repeal of the arms embargo—asked by the president—could be passed this session in view of the 200 to 182 house vote to continue a modified ban on arms shipments. Adjournment in mid-July was widely predicted.

Tydings Helps G. O. P.

The president's authority to devalue the dollar further and to maintain a $2,000,000,000 exchange stabilization fund expires at midnight. Republicans, led by a late Democrat—Tydings of Maryland—talked to death a senate-house conference agreement extending them two years and pegging the price for domestic silver at 71.1 cents an ounce.

The talk marathon continued, however, and Democratic leaders finally obtained an agreement to vote by 4 o'clock p. m. (C.S.T.) Wednesday on the extension and support. The senate adjourned at 11 p. m. with several hundred persons still in the galleries.

Butressed by an opinion from Attorney General Murphy, administration forces contended passage of the extension bill would revive the president's powers without the necessity of putting an entirely new bill through both houses. Republicans and some Democrats took sharp issue with this, but took comfort in the knowledge the powers had at least lapsed.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic floor leader, forecast no disruption of the international money markets as a result of the lapse.

Reads Murphy Letter

Just before the senate quit, Barkley had the clerk read an undated letter to the president from the attorney general stating:

"It is my opinion that the bill, if enacted after midnight June 30, will confer upon you the powers enumerated in it until June 30, 1941."

President Roosevelt stayed up late to receive news of the filibuster and to sign bills carrying nearly $3,000,000,000 for relief and agriculture benefits for the new fiscal year that began at midnight.

He affixed his signature to both a bit reluctantly because among other things congress had banned the federal theater project and added unbudgeted millions for the farmers without levying taxes to pay the bill.

Lights in the nearby treasury department also burned late—long after the administrative money powers, voted in 1933, had lapsed.

Money In Campaign

No word was forthcoming whether any new fiscal steps were planned for use in a possible emergency, or what powers, if any, could be utilized pending final congressional action.

Republicans said money would figure in the 1940 presidential campaign.

"It's already in the campaign," Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) told reporters.

Broadway Is Gloomy
Over Retirement of
U. S. From Theaters

New York.—(AP)—Uncle Sam was out of the show business today—Broadway was glum at losing the biggest spending "angel" in the history of the American theater.

The ambitious boys and girls of the WPA federal theater project, and aging troupers enabled by its funds to prolong careers in time, attended its "wake" last night in a mood rebellious and bitter.

Elimination of the project by congress from the 1939-40 relief appropriation threw 8,000 entertainers out of work, 3,500 in New York city alone.

In a "symbolical protest" a rewritten version of "Pinocchio," one of the projects' greatest hits, was presented at the farwell performance last night. In it, the puppet, instead of becoming a live boy, died—symbolizing the fate of the federal theater.

Legislature to Act on Bills to Boost Pensions

Potential Increase to Affect General Taxation Debate

Madison—(P)—Lurking in the shadows of the legislative debate on the general taxation problems, which is scheduled to begin in the assembly next Wednesday, is the matter of potential increases in state allotments for old age pensions.

The senate and the assembly both have placed the Wisconsin Recovery league's pension bill on their calendars for action next Friday—two days after the legislators return from the July 4 holiday recess—but the administration's $26,000 revenue bill will be the first order of business.

While the two proposals have been linked together because of the financial outlay involved, administration supporters insisted the budget balancing tax bill be given prior consideration.

Provide Revenue
The bills propose to raise additional revenue from taxpayers and statistics are available from all camps.

The foes and friends of highway fund diversion are prepared to argue out the administration proposal of using $7,500,000 of auto license money for purposes other than road construction.

In the middle of the dispute will be the other suggestions to put two-cents tax on every package of cigarettes, increasing the wine and liquor imposts, boost the corporation income taxes to 6 per cent on net returns below $6,000 and make all income taxpayers contribute to the teachers retirement fund.

If the assembly finishes this task on schedule, it will take up Friday the bill to pay $60 a month pensions to persons over 60 and the senate, on the same day, will have before it a revision of the same bill reducing the figure from $60 to $45 a month.

Minority groups have sought numerous times to get action on the pension issue ahead of the general tax program.

Tax on Income
The Recovery league bill, sometimes referred to as the "Little Townsend plan," proposes to levy a 2 per cent tax on gross income. It is in competition with other bills to fix the top pension at $40 a month and levy income taxes to pay the cost.

According to arguments presented to legislative committees, Wisconsin now has a $30 maximum pension law, is presently paying an average of around $21 a month and expects to have 16,000 new pensioners during the next fiscal year.

Senator Harry Belmont (D) Port Washington, passed out copies of a report delivered to him on request by George Keith, supervisor of the state pension department. Keith estimated the Recovery league bill to pay $45 a month to those 60 and over would take in $75,000 to $250,000 beneficiaries an estimated annual cost of $84,000,000 to $120,000,000.

Assuming that the federal government would contribute $20 a month the cost would be between $62,500,000 and $82,500,000 annually, Keith said.

The state budget bill did not provide for any expansion of the pension program.

critic of Chamberlain's policy of conciliation. Eden, Chamberlain's first foreign secretary, resigned from the government Feb. 20, 1938, in opposition to the attempts of the prime minister then to deal with dictators.

Both Churchill and Eden have been repeated targets of Nazi press attacks and both now are staunch supporters of Britain's policy of building up defensive mutual assistance alliances.

See Strong Effect
Several observers declared no other move at this time would be more effective in impressing Hitler that "another Munich" over the free city is impossible.

Reports of early cabinet changes coincided with apparently inspired articles in London newspapers of growing concern in the government that Hitler planned some move toward annexing Danzig.

Prime Minister Chamberlain and Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood were expected to swell the chorus of speeches and radio broadcasts by which Britain now is warning Germany day by day that there are no "ifs" in her stand.

Sir Kingsley went to Wellington, Shropshire today to make a speech in which it was believed he would remind Nazis of Britain's boast that her air force is now second to none.

Chamberlain was expected to repeat Sunday in a broadcast to the nation Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax's recent warning that Britain is prepared to fulfill her pledge to Poland in any showdown of force with Germany over Danzig.

The prime minister was scheduled to speak at 9:05 p. m. (2:05 p. m. C. S. T.).

Halifax, meanwhile, was expected to receive a full report on the Polish situation from Sir Howard William Kennard, British ambassador to Warsaw, who flew here last night.

It was said also that Britain's ambassador to Berlin, Sir Neville Henderson, and her ambassador to Bucharest, Sir Reginald Hoare, would come to London within the next few weeks to report.

PLOT DEFEAT OF COMPROMISE MONETARY BILL

This trio of Republican big-wigs in the Senate got together in Washington to plot ways and means of defeating the administration's compromise monetary bill, after Senator Warren R. Austin (R. Vt.) (center) said the measure would be talked to death. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (left) (R. Mich.), a leader in the fight for ending President Roosevelt's authority to devalue the dollar further, said: "There will be a great many speeches." Another leader in the struggle was Senator Robert Taft (right) (R. Ohio).

Predict Approval Of Bill to Lower Taverns in State

Would Place Limitation At One to Every 500 Of Population

Post-Crescent-Madison Bureau

Madison—Final legislative approval of a drastic tavern limitation law—sponsored by the organized tavern industry—was predicted today by its supporters as the measure neared a date for action on the state senate calendar. The bill has already been approved in the assembly by a big margin.

The bill proposes to limit the number of taverns in Wisconsin to one per 500 of population, which will eventually result in a sharp reduction of the number of retail liquor had beer outlets in almost every Wisconsin community.

There would not be an outright reduction, but limitation would be achieved by prohibiting localities from licensing any establishment which is suspended voluntarily or involuntarily for any reason.

The bill has the opposition of the northern resort legislators, for limitation would have its most drastic effect on some of the northern counties which although sparsely populated have a happy distribution of taverns and roadhouses catering to the tourist trade.

According to Paul Peterson of the Tavern League of Wisconsin, which introduced the bill, Iron county has a tavern for every 38 native inhabitants.

If the bill ever reaches its full potential effect, it is expected that the 13,000 taverns presently operating in Wisconsin will be reduced by about 50 per cent.

Sponsorship of the limitation bill by the tavern men themselves, according to reports given the legislature, is a reflection of the economic conditions in the business. According to testimony presented at hearings, the average tavern keeper in Wisconsin last year netted only $500 from his business. In some cities, it was said, the proprietor earns less than the bartender in his employ.

Several cities in Wisconsin have already enacted local limitation ordinances, but according to the league's spokesmen, such local laws are ineffective because taverns promptly spring up on the borders of cities in contiguous townships.

While there is a plausibility of heavy losses in revenues to local treasuries with the ultimate reduction in the number of taverns, at least one large Wisconsin city the tavernkeepers favoring the limitation have agreed with the city government to accept higher license fees so that the amount of license revenue would remain at the old level.

Stops Cold Beer Sale Under Class A Permit

City Clerk Carl J. Becher said today he has notified all holders of Class A beer licenses in Appleton to stop selling refrigerated beer. The clerk said he was asked to send the notices by John Roach, head of the state beverage tax enforcement division.

The state law prohibits the holders of Class A licenses from selling cold beer in competition with the holders of more expensive types of licenses. The permit allows the holder to sell beer by the bottle to be consumed away from the premises.

Monetary Measure Filibuster Shows Political Motives

Tactics Reflect Credit on Neither Party, Lawrence Says

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington—Two days ago, this correspondent asked what the position of the conservative Republicans would be if their silver Democratic brethren deserted them when President Roosevelt raised the ante and offered a higher price for silver.

That's precisely what the president did and the Republicans were left on a limb so that the only thing they felt they could do was to engage in a filibuster in order to attempt to defeat the monetary bill.

This sort of back and forth tactics, designed to make a football out of national issues, reflects credit on neither Republicans nor Democrats and reveals the true motive of both parties as plainly political. The administration argues in defense that the conservative Republicans started the game by joining with the bloc of silver Democrats and that what has happened since—namely, offering a higher silver price—was an unavoidable act of reprisal.

What is more vital to consider is that as soon as the White House agreed to a higher price for silver, the support of the Democratic senators from the silver producing states was regained for the president's devaluation bill. Thus the majority in the senate finally lined up was sufficient to give the president the devaluation powers for which he asked and only the Republican filibuster of a minority, taking advantage of the midnight deadline, had a leverage on the situation.

Filibusters happen frequently when an automatic date of expiration is faced because it is easy to discuss a bill a few hours. The parliamentary situation was that failure to pass the extension by midnight last night meant the necessity of a new bill to be reintroduced in both houses and acted on again by committees.

Trading Votes
The spectacle of trading votes on both sides to get a higher price for silver or the restoration of the presidential power is not new in politics, but it is a disheartening one. Many of the adherents of the anti-devaluation bloc justify their position on the ground that the end justifies the means. This is what the New Deal has been contending for several years. It is amazing to find conservatives adopting the same point of view.

Whether the power to devalue the dollar within the narrow limits of 59 cents to 80 cents is one that the president should exercise or should be placed in the hands of a national monetary commission of experts free from political influence is not being debated. The issue instead is political. Many sincere opponents of a flexible dollar insist that rigidity helps trade and commerce. Just as many argue the exact opposite.

Certainly a glance at the many complicated provisions of the trade agreements and treaties shows how important it is for the Washington government to be able to meet currency depreciation by overnight action. When rigidity is established and foreigners know that a congressional committee has to act, that hearings have to be held, that perhaps a special session of congress has to be called in order to meet trade changes relating to monetary exchange, there is an advantage with the foreign speculator.

It has been argued that speculation occurs even when the power resides in the president's hands because rumors spread throughout the world. But such rumors can be squelched overnight by action or by public statement. There is no way to deal with rumors of what might happen over a period of weeks or months if congress has to act on a monetary problem relating to foreign exchange. Had it not been for the use—and perhaps unconstitutional use—of an old wartime power in 1933 when gold was impounded, there is no telling how much money speculators might have made if the usual procedure had been followed.

Foreign Raids
To fix the dollar's gold content at a rigid point has many advantages from the viewpoint of international stability, but only when the world is in a position to accept such rigidity in good faith. Today, the use of an old wartime power in 1933 when gold was impounded, there is no telling how much money speculators might have made if the usual procedure had been followed.

There is no doubt that a stable dollar is better than an unstable one, that to remove the devaluation power from the hands of the president and place it in the hands of the gold content at a definite figure is better than to leave it flexible, but who can say that in an emergency such as faces world trade and currencies today the United States Government shall be placed in a straitjacket where it cannot act instantly to protect itself against raids by foreign governments manipulating their currencies to benefit their trade as against our own? This is the real question at issue and a majority of both houses of congress have been ready in the last 24 hours to go along with the president—and only a minority of the senate, possessing parliamentary powers of obstruction, had refused to accede in a matter affecting more the international relations of the country than dollar value, to the judgment of the president of the United States.

There is no doubt that a stable dollar is better than an unstable one, that to remove the devaluation power from the hands of the president and place it in the hands of the gold content at a definite figure is better than to leave it flexible, but who can say that in an emergency such as faces world trade and currencies today the United States Government shall be placed in a straitjacket where it cannot act instantly to protect itself against raids by foreign governments manipulating their currencies to benefit their trade as against our own? Kaukauna Legion Juniors Lose to New London Nine

Two Bulldog Pitchers Hold Kaw Batters To Three Hits

Kaukauna — New London came to town yesterday afternoon and dealt the American Legion junior baseballers their second defeat of the year, 6 to 4. Two runs in the third put the visitors in front at 4 to 2, and two more in first of the seventh made Kaukauna's two in the last of the seventh of no avail. Dave Stern and Weldon Harris handled the pitching duties for New London, and gave out but three hits. Harris relieved Stern after two innings. Together the Bulldog hurlers set down ten Kaws on strikes. John Rieth, who went all the way for Kaukauna, fanned 11 and allowed six hits. Five errors by his teammates kept Rieth in hot water. The visitors lost no time in scoring, with Red Garrity, first up, dropping a home run over the left field fence. Waahl then singled to center, went to third as Peters let the ball go through him and continued on home when Neil Lambie took Peters' relay and threw wild to third.

Tied in Second
The Kaws tied the score on one hit in the second. After Lambie had fanned Stern, grew rather wild, walking Phelan. Fernal, Herman Franz and John Rieth, Phelan was caught off third, however, so Willis Ranquette's double scored only the latter two.

New London came back with two more in the third. Garrity walked and promptly stole second and third. Houk struck out but Waahl's grounder went for a hit. Hertz fanned and Wilson rolled on to Giordana. The Kaukauna second baseman threw a wild first, Waahl coming around to score.

In the first of the seventh New London put the game on ice, with W. Harris and Garrity on base. Houk flew out and Waahl struck out, but Hertz doubled down the left field line to score two more.

Fernal walked to begin the Kaws' last chance at bat. Franz and Rieth lost out on strikes, with Ranquette's third hit plating Fernal, who had pilfered second and third. Peters was safe as his grounder to second was muffed. It was all over as Peters popped up to the pitcher.

Ranquette, for Kaukauna, had three hits to lead all the batters. Garrity and Waahl were the only players with two each.

Marvin Schuler To Pitch Sunday

Brother Eddie Will Rest For Green Bay Game Tuesday

Kaukauna — Marvin "Dago" Schuler has been nominated by Manager Joey Vils to go after his second Fox River valley league victory as the Mellow Brews journey to Menasha tomorrow to open the second half season. Dago baffled Appleton here last Sunday to win his first game for the Kaws. Vils will then have Eddie Schuler, the mainstay of the Kaukauna staff, ready for Green Bay on Tuesday. Schuler has almost recovered from a sore arm, and will be shooting for his fifth loop win against Green Bay. The Thomas Drugs have never been able to win with Ed on the mound against them.

The Kaws will be strengthened soon with the return of Gib Busse to his outfield spot. Busse, taken ill several weeks ago, will be ready to play at Manitowoc July 16. The Menasha and Green Bay contests are the only games for the Brews until this date, as New London, slated here on July 9, has disbanded its team.

Junior Martens will be on the receiving end of Schuler's slants tomorrow, with Ralph Wurdinger at first, Icky Van Drasek at second, Carl Schuler at shortstop, Joey Gertz at third and Vils, Ves Kappell and Leo Kappell in the outfield. Other probable starters, Gertz may start in the outfield in place of Leo Kappell, with Bob Van Drasek taking over third base.

Machines Upset League Leading Klub Team, 3 to 1

Steger Holds Previously Unbeaten Team to Five Hits

Kaukauna — The fifth place Kaukauna Machine Corporation team provided the biggest upset of the city league season last night, taking a 3 to 1 decision from the Klubs, previously unbeaten leaders. The game between the C. Y. O. and Klubs was postponed, as the American Legion junior baseball team, with several C. Y. O. stars in the lineup, didn't finish its contest with New London in time. The Klub-Machine contest was one played over from two weeks ago, when the Klubs won 3 to 2 on the high school diamond. The league rules provide all games must be played on the library field.

Don Steger, who set down the Ritz Tavern outfit with one hit Wednesday night, was the fellow who checked the Klub sluggers last night. Five hits were spaced in the seven innings, and only in the fifth could the Klubs combine two for their only run. The winners didn't close the apple all over the lot, making only two hits of Sherman Powers, but Klub misuses the name. Steger whiffed eight of his opponents, with Powers setting down ten on strikes.

Scores on Fumble
The Machines started the scoring in the second. Steger survived on an error, went to third on passed balls and scored when Kuhn's grounder was fumbled. The winners took a 3 to 0 lead, counting twice more in the fourth when Kuhn, safe on another error, and Vandynhoven, who had walked, counted on John Bloch's hit.

The losers only run came in the fifth. Bud Bootz hit safely and went to second as Vic Gerhartz walked, and scored on Powers' safety.

The C. Y. O. squad is now the only undefeated team, with a record of four wins and no losses. The only remaining game in the first half is between the leaders and the Klubs. A win for the Klubs will make a playoff necessary for the first half title, as both teams would have four and one records. The teams are expected to tangle sometime Sunday in this decisive battle.

Rohan Defies State Inspectors Seeking To Look Over Barn

Kaukauna—William Rohan, Kaukauna farmer whose "milk at five cents a quart" campaign has annoyed the state department of agriculture and markets and brought customers to his farm, said that he refused to admit two state inspectors to view his property this morning.

"I told them that they could come in and eat with me, if they wanted to," Rohan said. "But that they were wasting their time if they intended to look my barn over. I told them to go back and get a warrant before they showed up again."

The former assemblyman said he talked with the two inspectors for some time and that whenever they insisted that they carry out the inspection, he persuaded them not to take such a course, without a warrant.

Rohan stated that this was the third time this week that inspectors have called at the farm. "They came Tuesday and Thursday, but I wasn't home and one of the boys here told them they better wait until the boss gets back."

Humane Officer Quits Job at 92

George F. Comings Leaves Post; Served in Many State Departments

Madison—The office of state humane agent was vacated today by retirement of George F. Comings, 92, who had held the position nearly 11 years.

Far beyond the normal retirement age, Comings notified county humane officers of his plan several weeks ago. He has been confined to his home for the past three weeks with a foot infection.

Ralph M. Ammon, director of the department of agriculture and markets to which the humane agent's office is attached, said the new agricultural advisory board had not appointed a successor.

It is probable, he said, that the board will assign the humane agent's duties to one of the six divisions set up in the department under the reorganization program now in progress.

"There may not be enough money available to provide an adequate salary for a full-time job," Ammon explained.

Comings was appointed humane agent in 1928. He was elected lieutenant governor in 1921 and served two terms. He also had served on the state board of agriculture and on the rural school committee of the state department of public instruction. He was born March 18, 1848, in Greenboro, Vt., moved in 1870 to St. Joseph, Mich., and in 1900 to Eau Claire.

Bus Firm to Provide New Service Between Milwaukee, Green Bay

The Interstate Commerce commission at Washington today authorized the Northland Greyhound Lines, Inc., to extend its operations in Michigan and Wisconsin, one of the extensions to provide new service between Milwaukee and Green Bay on the east side of Lake Winnebago.

Other lines to be established under the commission's authorization will be between Calumet, Mich., and St. Ignace and Escanaba, Mich.; and between Humboldt, Mich., and Iron Mountain, Mich.

The Railway Express Agency, Inc., rail carriers operating in the territory, and the Brotherhood of Trainmen opposed the application.

The commission said, however, the extensions would provide a much needed bus service in the upper peninsula of Michigan, and would afford prompt delivery of express and newspapers to many points in that area. It added that it was necessary for the company to operate between Milwaukee and Green Bay in order to make connections to its principal routes to the south and through Chicago.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Norman Bellings, 1917 N. Morrison street, yesterday at St. Elizabeth hospital.

Laabs Loses Wagers as Snow Is Found in Avenue Ravine

Snow, a little dirty perhaps, but nevertheless snow, was found in the College avenue ravine by ambitious diggers this morning and August W. Laabs, Appleton realtor, paid off six bets at $1 each.

Last winter Laabs told Glenn Arthur, Bud Neumann, Jerry Marx, Larry Schuh, John Milbow and Joseph Broutland that there would be no snow left in the ravine by July 1 and backed his statement with a $1 wager with each of them.

Shortly after 11 o'clock this morning the contingent clambered down through rattling tin cans and other refuse into the ravine and dug into a under covered mound to prove Laabs was wrong—the third time in the 20 years that he has been making the same wager.

Idhe's Anti-Labor Stand Earned Him Post, Peik Avers

Chilton Assemblyman Charges Heil "Reward-ed" Neenah Farmer

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—Governor Heil appointed Herman Idhe of Neenah to the chairmanship of the state board of agriculture as a reward "for pay-off" for Idhe's "vicious fight against labor" as the chairman of the Wisconsin Council of Agriculture, Assemblyman Carl Peik of Calumet county, (D), Chilton, charged today.

Peik's claim was made in a radio speech here, the text of which was made public today.

The appointment was made by Julius P. Heil, himself a big businessman," Peik said. "Governor Heil is the man who not only approved the repeal of all beneficial farm legislation during this session of the legislature, but he is also the man who has been running up and down the state demanding that the tax on oleo-margarine be repealed so we can please the southern artificial butter crowd."

Peik said that as a farmer-member he has met a "great many surprises" in the legislature "in the six months of this costly session."

He said that "nothing shocked" so much as the calculated cold-blooded attempt by organized special interests to drive a wedge between agriculture and labor. He called the Council of Agriculture "stooge for big business" in its sponsorship of the "employment peace act" which is now law.

Kaps Council "This Council of Agriculture is a super-holding company of farm organizations," said the Chilton legislator. "While in theory it could well be a powerful, affirmative voice for Wisconsin agriculture, in fact the hard-boiled reactionary leadership is more interested in running errands for Big Business than it is in working up genuine farm relief legislation."

"It gathers up the farmers' hard-earned dollars and hires itself a handsome suite of offices in Madison's most expensive hotel. We farmers might not object to this reckless spending of our money if the money were used for constructive, worthwhile purposes."

"But what has happened? This suite of offices has become the factory which grinds out legislation to injure and destroy the best customers we farmers have—the laborers in the city."

Peik declared that the "Council's campaign of hatred against labor became so intolerable that two of the most powerful organizations in the council withdrew from it. These were the Midland Cooperative Wholesale and the Farmers' Cooperative Milk Pool."

Introduces Bill To Wipe Out Tax On Oleo Product

Author Says Hearing Will Confirm or Confound Certain Rumors

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—Assemblyman Reno W. Trego of Merrill said today that a hearing on his bill for outright repeal of the 15 cents a pound oleo tax will either prove or disprove the rumors that paper manufacturers and others in the Fox river valley and other localities of Wisconsin have been losing southern markets because of the tax.

Trego said that it was to obtain such information that he sponsored the repeal bill, introduced by the finance committee at his request Friday.

"I've been hearing complaints for several years that paper mills, metal manufacturers and others have lost southern markets because the south wants to retaliate against us for our tax on their product," Trego explained.

"This hearing ought to bring those charges to light, and settle them once and for all." He recalled that Governor Heil in a speech this year complained that a Fox valley paper mill lost a half million dollar order from a southern customer after the tax law became effective in 1935.

Capitol observers recalled, however, that a recent hearing on the Balzer bill proposing to reduce the tax to 5 cents a pound furnished nothing conclusive on the alleged retaliatory tactics of southern businessmen and farmers. Some speakers claimed that the tax was harmful, others denied that the south had attempted to punish Wisconsin business by cancelling orders.

Because of Governor Heil's forthright opposition to the tax, because of the persistent reports of retaliation in the southern states, and because enforcement of the tax law has been largely ineffective due to constant disputes over interpretation and drawn out litigation, many legislators feel that the law should be repealed.

Farm interests will sweep down on the legislature in protest, however, as was illustrated yesterday in the unequalled opposition expressed by Milo Swanson of the big Wisconsin Council of Agriculture, to both the Balzer and Trego bills.

Bordens Tie With Gambles for Top Place in League

Take Share of First Half Title With Win Over Knights

New London—Bordens tied Gambles for the first half championship of the City Industrial Softball league when they eked out a 7 to 6 win over the Knights of Columbus in a postponed game under the lights at the city hall park Thursday evening. The two teams will have to play off for the title and still have a postponed game to play in the second half.

Two home runs by Robert Shortell nearly upset the Milkmen Thursday night as the K. C. led a tight contest right up to the last frame. Bordens scored two runs in the first inning but in the last half of the second the K. C. managed to fill the bases when Shortell batted his first homer to give his squad a 4 to 2 lead.

Bordens caught up again, but in the sixth Shortell cracked another homer with a man on base to jump ahead 6 to 4. A spasm of loose fielding on the part of the K. C. led Bordens creep up a run each inning to tie in the sixth and gain the deciding run in the seventh.

Gambles Win

Gambles defeated the Elwood Tap Rooms, successors to the Prah's News team, 13 to 5 in a regularly scheduled game at the Washington High school grounds last evening. The Elwood Tap Room is sponsoring a squad in the league in place of Prah's News. R. White and Leon Polaski hurled for the Tap Rooms while Melvin Wolfrath and Ken Sweedy took turns for Gambles. Numerous walks and errors helped the winners.

There will be no games Monday because of the July Fourth holiday. The Tap Rooms are slated again next Wednesday to meet the Knights of Columbus.

Catholic Church at Marion Will Observe Its Fiftieth Anniversary Next Tuesday

Marion—The fiftieth anniversary of St. Mary's Catholic church will be observed Tuesday, July 4, with a mass at 10 o'clock in the morning, confirmation and a dinner at noon.

The first services held here for the few Catholic families were at the Lawrence Milbauer home when the priest of St. Rose's congregation at Clintonville would say mass at a small improvised altar.

Fifty years ago about a dozen families banded together and built the present church. For about eight years they were without an organ and choir. Forty-four years ago the Peter Vennix family moved here and Mr. Vennix led a campaign to raise money to buy an organ and organize a choir. The congregation arranged programs, dinners and socials. Mrs. John Eut was the first organist. Mrs. Charles Warnick took over the organ for a while after which Maud Meyer, now Mrs. F. M. Mulvaney, became organist. Regina Mauel, now Mrs. Will Daley, was organist for a number of years when Mrs. Walter Maes accepted the office and is the present organist.

The first priest serving this parish was Father Bell of Clintonville. Marion was a mission of St. Rose's church of Clintonville during the pastorates of the Rev. Fathers Bell, Eugeuroth, Schmitz, Bastian and Loerke, when Tigerton built a church and parsonage and since then this congregation has been served by the Tigerton pastors, namely Fathers Van Bogart, Quella and Schaefer, the latter the present pastor.

Tuesday morning the Rev. Aloysius Bastian of Oshkosh will read the high mass, the Rev. John Loerke of Green Bay will serve as deacon and the Rev. Joseph Van Bogart will be sub-deacon. The sermon will be delivered by the Most Rev. Paul P. Rhode, bishop of Green Bay.

A class of 33 from Tigerton and Marion will be confirmed by the bishop during the morning services. The Tigerton congregation has been invited to take part in all services.

At noon the women of the congregation will serve a dinner at the village hall to 300 persons. About 25 priests are expected to be present. Mrs. Frank Hofman is the only charter member living here.

Frost Upheavals Double Highway Patching Work

Because of the frost upheavals this spring the patching and crack-filling work on state trunk highways in Outagamie county has been doubled this year, according to Arnold Krueger, county highway commissioner. Krueger said that a survey made by John Ritger, patrol superintendent, showed the concrete roads were damaged more than in any of the last seven or eight years. Purchase of another ton barrel to be used for the work was ordered this week by the highway committee. Three others are in use.

While this type of work usually is completed by July 4, this year the work will be continued to a much later date, Krueger said.

Rift Between Simpson, Dewey Apparently Exists No More

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

New York—The most important piece of Republican news this week is the authoritative information that there is no friction between Thomas E. Dewey and Kenneth F. Simpson, New York national committeeman who has been a stormy symbol of Republican liberalism in the east.

An explanation is necessary to make clear the significance of this development. The team of Dewey and Simpson, which during the last two or three years has breathed new life into the Republican party in New York, appeared last winter to be cracking up. Tempers and irritations on both sides created a situation which distressed many Republicans.

Simpson, believing that the influence of Herbert Hoover's friends prevented him from going on the Republican national executive committee, issued a public statement severely criticizing the former president. Other incidents of minor character followed. To some of these Dewey took emphatic exception. Some conservative Republicans, always against Simpson, seized this opportunity to drive a wedge into the breach in the hope of ousting Simpson from party influence.

This situation resulted in Simpson becoming something of a symbol of progressive Republicanism, and for a time it appeared he was about to be made a martyr.

Personal friends recognized that the Dewey candidacy would suffer if the breach continued and if Simpson were thrown out. Several volunteer peace-makers have been at work on the situation.

Both Warned That Quarrel Would Be Fatal

It was represented to Dewey that old guard Republicans in up state New York, never too enthusiastic about him, were taking advantage of this situation to make the split irrevocable and set themselves up in complete control of the delegation next year.

It has been impressed upon both Dewey and Simpson that to have the quarrel go on would be fatal. Among those who felt this way was former Governor Al Landon of Kansas. On his recent trip east he indicated his distress at the situation. To one of Dewey's close friends, Landon made the point that a prospective candidate who could not command his home base and who had discord at home could hardly expect to command in the national field.

Whether these representations had any direct effect I cannot say. But the fact is that Dewey had Kenneth Simpson to dinner at his home this week following a previous dinner meeting a short time before. The further fact is that there now is no friction between them.

Culkin Says Fight Would Result in Defeat

Only a few days ago Congressman Culkin of New York said in Washington that the fight against Simpson, if successful, would cost the party defeat in 1940. He stated the situation in these words: "It may be that Dewey today is listening to the siren calls of more reactionary party leaders, but the fact stands that the 1939 campaign was waged on substantially the platform that Mr. Simpson stands for. To abandon this platform now by throwing Simpson to the wolves leader, discussed extension problems and program work carried out in the county in conjunction with the state and federal departments, on his visit here with County Agent A. L. McMahon this week. Mr. Wojta inspected several grain fields and visited the Calumet County park. He thought the county park site excellent for recreational activities.

Dr. and Mrs. John J. Minahan of Chilton have received word of the appointment of their son, Cadet John E. Minahan, class of 1940, United States Military Academy as lieutenant.

Dr. Elmer Pfeiffer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Pfeiffer, who received his degree in dentistry at Marquette university recently, has been awarded a certificate of merit for outstanding work in children's dentistry. Only one certificate is issued yearly by each college in the state.

PREXY YELLOW KID

Prexy Smith is pointed at as the greatest con man who ever took hold of a university.

But does he not somehow represent something of a certain modern concept of education in politics? Con man Smith, called Prexy for short, was a true and faithful son of the Long machine and applauded loudest when Huey hollered, "Every man a king" or "Every man a millionaire."

But what of the political life and the legal problems confronting the people of Louisiana in order that justice may be done to this brother of Yellow Kid Weil?

Under our moth-eaten and sagging law it is charged that Prexy embezzled half a million or a million dollars and "converted the same to his own use." On the other hand it is charged that he "unlawfully and fraudulently" employed such things as the bonds and notes belonging to the university as collateral to his own loans. Both these charges are shams and delusions. In a strictly enlightened sense they are Tory and reactionary.

An accused today must be judged by the great and truly important principles of life and of government and not by such tiny, pinheaded notions which usually are spoken by trades people and money grubbers.

This money was bet in the Chicago wheat market. Prexy said the price of wheat was going up. It wasn't a gamble with Prexy. He knew. The administration at Washington said it was going to make wheat go up. How can it be said that Prexy "wifitully and feloniously" as the law demands, did anything that was wrong when he merely demonstrated his utter faith and loyalty in the promises of the administration? Did he want to get purged?

Nor is there any good reason for a dark quarrel between the banks which hold a half million dollars of paper said to be false and the state of Louisiana over the mere theoretical loss. Why should the banks and the state have an argument or a lawsuit over a bubble or a gossamer of spider web?

Correctly understood and viewed in the kindly and friendly manner of the modern day this silly debate can be closed by marking the loss on the books as an "investment." The word "debt" no longer holds any terror for the American people.

It may be said that if the banks find they have some unsound security it will be further declared that Prexy must personally owe them money. But is it not a great and diamond-studded truth that since the bank gets its money from the people and all these debts are owed within the country there is in fact no debt at all?

There is one phase of the situation that might be very serious for Prexy, the con man. If the evidence establishes that he participated in all these many transactions just for the purpose of enriching himself and without intending to spread the lucre out with the gang, a vile piece of hypocrisy will have been uncovered. For along with the new understanding of "debts" and "investments" is also the firm and positive rule that the right to trim and delude farmers and workers, the public generally, does not belong to any individual con man, even a Prexy, but belongs to the ruling group, and its fruits must be spread about to the glory of the leaders and the continuance of the regime.

THE BOARD RETREATS

The National Labor Relations Board has climbed down from the band wagon on which it was riding.

In the effort to prevent the very necessary amendment of the Wagner Act this untrustworthy board tries to make itself trustworthy by changing some of the rules through which it perverted the law as well as anything approaching fair play.

It says it will now permit employers to petition for elections so they may learn which contesting employee group has a majority for collective bargaining.

The smirk it now adopts for its countenance in lieu of the arrogant contempt it once showed will only tend to reveal to the American people the ghastly nature of its creation and the perfectly Nazi conception of its purpose and operations.

Who would trust it not to change its rules again unless the act specifically prevents it?

And who wants to continue in our country under a law that permits any board to rule or ruin just as it happens to have slept well last night or come through the tumbling of a nightmare?

This board cannot soothe the public. It cannot hoodwink the voters. It cannot pretend decency when it has already made and enforced rules that compelled tens of thousands of workers to fight other tens of thousands of workers and all of them bewildered as to why they couldn't find out who was in the majority. The Post-Crescent charged directly when this rule was put into operation that it was inaugurated by Mr. Lewis to try to take over the labor field by force and confusion, by strike and bomb and bricks. Nothing has occurred to change that opinion. Nothing has even been submitted to fortify any possible reason for such a ridiculous rule.

It will not only be necessary for the Wagner Act to be amended so that Hitler methods cannot be undertaken but the board itself has been such an unpleasant aroma in the public nostrils it would be good policy to abolish it and usher in a new one with another name to help us forget the political bargaining that Mr. Lewis made with the administration and how American workers and the American public were despoiled to pay the debt.

AND THEN THE MILLIONS DIED

The trigger man of the World war was Gavril Princip who shot a revolver twice and thereby touched off billions of other detonations that were not only heard around the world but went around it.

It should be of at least passing interest as we face the possibility of another World war to inquire into the nature of the fellow who started tens of millions of people killing each other on any number of battle fronts that reached from the English Channel through the Alps, the Carpathians and into the Caucasus, dropped down to African jungles and then reached up above the Arctic circle and again spread out to the Falkland Islands down near the Antarctic, touched into the South Seas, raced up to the Dardanelles, to Bagdad, Jerusalem, Shantung, back to Nazareth and actually out onto the biblical battlefield of Armageddon itself.

Propaganda said that Princip didn't matter because the World war was inevitable anyway. But a more honest and unprejudiced opinion is quite to the contrary. It took a score of incidents, all flaming hot, all dropping at precisely the right second, to set off the magazine, and Princip was one of the most important.

The records are pretty complete about him. He was given a life term and died in a few years in an Austrian prison. But the Viennese in methodical fashion had him examined physically, mentally, morally, nervously and every other way.

First of all, he was tubercular and 20 years of age. In school he early became troublesome. But he learned enough to become an avid reader. And the reading was too heavy for his brain power to absorb. Thus he was an ardent advocate of socialism and at the same time an equally ardent advocate of the Greater Slav movement, the grandiose scheme advanced largely by Russia and built upon the idea that all Slavs would be gathered together under the Czar. Poor Princip didn't realize that the two plans he so warmly advocated were not only hostile but utterly contradictory.

Here was a psychopathic case, a delinquent, a youth who would not work but kept his poor, sad, mental processes constantly brewing and stewing. Among other things he told one of the medical men who examined him:

"It makes me unquiet to speak about my life. When I think by myself everything is clear, but when I speak with anybody I become uncertain."

Those in the conspiracy with him were of the same brand, bad sons to hard working mothers, some of them children of confirmed alcoholics, and all of them marked with that positive characteristic of the delinquent—they would not work.

And so this little band of reform school boys staged a hero-martyr show 25 years ago that cost so many million lives men hate to count them up, and caused such world misery, torture and horror that the writer with the wildest imagination who ever penned anything before this war broke out would never have dared to approach its figures lest people tap their foreheads as they spoke of him.

What greater, what more deadly appraisal can be made of rulership in this world that permits the sacred duties entrusted to its care to be perverted, and man turned into a beast because of the irresponsible acts of psychopathic delinquents who become uncertain "when I speak with anybody?"

Opinions of Others

COMPLICATING STATE AID

Chairman Altmeyer of the Social Security board has recommended to the Senate Finance committee that the Federal government distribute public assistance grants on the basis of the relative "economic capacity" of the states. Some time ago another senate committee approved a relief bill sponsored by Senator Byrnes which attempted to carry out this principle. The Byrnes bill proposed a complicated grant-in-aid formula under which the Federal government would provide from 50 to 66 2-3 per cent of the amounts paid in the states. Individual states would get more than 50 per cent in proportion to their average per capita annual incomes fell below those of the country as a whole.

Aside from the complications it introduces, this formula is defective on several grounds. Per capita annual income for the country as a whole is a figure that can only be roughly estimated, subject to a liberal margin of error. This is even more true of per capita incomes in individual states. All federal aid programs incidentally involve a certain geographical "redistribution of wealth," but it is questionable whether this gain for the poorer states should

DALE HARRISON'S
In Old New York

New York—Michael Todd is one of Broadway's newer and more alert impresarios. He produced "The Hot Mikado" which has now transferred from Broadway to the World's Fair, on account of there is no one left on Broadway any more except a couple of "at liberty" zither players.

Todd is on the sunny side of 35, if you happen to believe either side of any age is solari-ous. He was in show business down in Texas a couple of years back when the Exposition bug hit Dallas and Fort Worth. Business wasn't nearly as hot as the weather. Some of the boys, including Michael, decided one day to play some pinocle, there being nothing else to do. They tried several spots, but all were too hot. Finally some one suggested the Antarctic Exhibit, which was air conditioned.

The game started in the morning and was going very good by afternoon. Just when the boys were enjoying the game most, customers began trickling in. It looked as though the game would have to be abandoned. Mr. Todd, however, had one of his frequent bright ideas. He moved the table over to a corner. The guides brought in the customers and pointed out the penguins and the dogs and other sights of the Frozen South. Then they came to the spot where the boys were playing pinocle.

"And this," the guide would say, in his best professional voice, "is the way the lonely souls of the Antarctic wastes while away the long winter months."

The game proceeded on into the night, and the customers never knew the difference. Mr. Todd, as I understand it, won $14.53.

It is hardly worth mentioning, but at the New York Police Academy, where young men learn to be Policemen, they teach among other things: "Modus Operandi of Anarchists" and "Modus Operandi of Gun Toters." They do NOT teach Latin, but if anyone asked them, the teachers could probably explain the meaning of "Modus Operandi," which would be a good idea. It is difficult to conceive of an officer apprehending a gun totter by clamping a stern hand upon his shoulder and saying: "I hereby arrest you on account of your modus operandi."

Mr. Albert Butler, a teacher of Tarpicheo, feels deeply on the subject of walking. People, he complains, don't know how to walk. He concedes it is a simple procedure, once one catches the knack. He warns that if one does not walk correctly, woe is him.

It sounds refreshingly sensible in a city where screwball ideas are born with every ticking second. Butler started in life as a mechanical engineer. From this he developed by easy stages into a dancing master. Some of engineering's basic principles he carried over into the dancing business—teaching body mechanics in terms of rhythm. Later, mulling the matter, he opined that the same principles apply equally to walking; and lately he has been demonstrating his "Walk Right" theory before clubs and physical education groups.

A friend of mine with embonpoint has been taking walking lessons from Mr. Butler for several weeks with fascinating results. By walking correctly he has reduced his embonpoint to practically none at all. Whereas he once looked like a balloon floating down Broadway, he now suggests the straw in a lemonade in the straightness of his torso. His ribs are pulled in and he breathes "down his spine"—a strange breathing space as I remember my Physiology, but it's Butler's idea and I guess he knows where he's breathing.

In New York is an indignant lady of 73. She is indignant at one of America's largest and solemnest banks, whose corporate face is growing increasingly red under her repeated rebukes.

The bank foreclosed and took over one of the town's gayest night spots several months ago. Every Thursday since that time a letter has come to the desk of the chairman of the bank. It is addressed in the fine Spencerian hand of a dignified old lady. Enclosed in each letter is the clipping of the night club's publicity—which is about girls in abbreviated clothes and spangles. The letter is always the same. It says: "I am a stockholder in your bank. Therefore you have made me an owner of a den of iniquity. Dispose of it at once."

(P.S. The bank wishes it could.)

Construction of a fruit store by the Fraser Lumber company for Joseph Belzer on the Irving Zuelke property on the southwest corner of Oneida street and College avenue was started the previous day.

The Seymour Home Economics club met at the home of Mrs. W. Barclay and the following officers were elected for the coming year: Mrs. R. Doersch, president; Mrs. Barclay, vice president; Mrs. J. Knox, secretary-treasurer.

Up to that time, tourists had been scarce, but Saturday morning the highways were crowded with Illinois and Indiana cars going north.

About 200 pigeons had been shipped to Storm Lake, Iowa, by the Kaukauna Pigeon club from where they were to be flown in a scheduled race Sunday. Albert Ludtke was leading other fanciers in the series of races for a trophy.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

LAURA'S WEDDING DAY

Beautiful sun, shine brightly now,
And let no shadows touch the bough.
The skies must be a perfect blue,
The roses a resplendent hue.
Across the hours no cares will stray,
For this is Laura's wedding day!
The harmony of true love lies
Deep in the azure of her eyes.
The future holds no darkling fears
To cloud the glory of her years.
All threatened sorrow fades away,
For this is Laura's wedding day.

In this serene and solemn hour,
The hopes of two young people flower.
We all draw nearer to the bliss
Of Heaven in an hour like this!
Hear the celestial music play,
For this is Laura's wedding day!

be further pyramided by a special formula. Moreover, it is politically almost certain that once the Federal government contributed two-thirds for old-age assistance, say, to some states and only one-half to others, pressure would immediately begin in the other states to secure a two-thirds contribution also. Meanwhile the attitude of congressmen toward social measures would be much more deeply influenced by sectional considerations than it is now. The present program of a flat percentage contribution to each state is both simpler and sounder.

A Bystander
In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington—It makes cold chills run up and down your spine to think what a tremendous responsibility rests on a naval commander in an outlying trouble-station like China.

If he backs away when he should shove up for some diplomatic in-fighting he loses face for the country. On the other hand, if he closes in and slugs too hard he may start a train of events running like a fuse straight to our barrel of high explosive national sentiment. Then we would have war.

That was the sort of thing Admiral Yarnell faced out in China in telling Japan that despite her warnings, American naval vessels would go where necessary to protect Yankee citizens. That would include Swatow, where the Japanese had just ordered us out. Those were blunt words, and circumstances can be imagined where they might have brought an even blunter reply.

As a matter of fact the Navy is quite proud of Yarnell's punch lines

LONG RECORD
Born far from the sea, in Independence, Iowa, a humorless, level-headed Admiral Yarnell has spent most of his adult life afloat. Furthermore his wife comes from a family that boasts three admirals and his only daughter is married to a flag-lieutenant under his command in Chinese waters.

The admiral has missed little of excitement in America's twentieth-century naval history. Was an ensign during the quelling of China's Boxer rebellion in 1900, helped occupy Vera Cruz, and commanded a World war patrol ship.

As technical advisor at the 1930 London naval conference he urged six-inch guns for cruisers instead of eight-inchers.

Went to his present job in the Far East in 1936, has followed a two-fisted policy in sticking up for U. S. rights. Now white-haired and 63, he is due to retire in a few months, but may stay on awhile if the President requests.

even though the State Department may shiver in a sort of ecstatic horror at such firm-lipped language.

Hard-nosed language has been the habit of American naval officers in the Orient ever since Admiral Pary bluffed his way into Japan. For some reason beyond the understanding of this correspondent, the U. S. always has exercised a stern fatherly attitude over China, and did for a time over Japan, although in recent years it has not been particularly welcomed there.

But the heavy naval hand hasn't always been so successful in other quarters. Doughty Captain Wilkes tried it on the British during the Civil War. He stopped a British ship and took off two Confederate agents, Mason and Slidell, who were bound for London to whip up support for the cause.

The Union went crazy with glee over the brilliant escape but we jolly well had to back out of it. Not in a long time has Britain allowed her ships or passengers to be treated in such high-handed fashion. The Union apologized for the affront under severe pressure from the British and released the two agents.

Again in 1914 some of Admiral Fletcher's sailors were seized in a little Mexican town and the Admiral got tough. The sailors were freed with the usual routine explanations, but Fletcher demanded that Mexico salute the flag. We were then having a dispute with President Huerta and he refused to know to the colossus of the North.

It made a nasty situation. Many in the government wished the Admiral hadn't been so patriotic. The administration had to back him up. Huerta would not apologize so the fleet bombarded Vera Cruz, took it over and held it for six months before the United States American republics drew ever further into their shells. Finally the ABC powers, Argentina, Brazil and Chile—offered to help settle the affair and we were glad of their good offices.

Probably the only conclusion to draw from all this business is that our naval commanders can be rough as blazes as long as they pick on nations that can't fight back. Japan is pretty busy right now and may have to pacify us, just as we had to pacify England while we were in the Civil War.

CAPITOL DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—A lesson in the making of state legislation can be learned by a reading of a legislative bill.

Wyngaard

clubs, federations, and leagues which are pressing their demands on the men who make our laws. One member reported the other day that for over a year he has been by hand on plain note paper he receives half a dozen communications from organized pressure groups.

The result is that the pressure groups get the legislation they want passed or killed; the laws which affect only the unorganized private citizen are taken up when there is time for them.

EXPLANATION WANTED

Some legislators are going to ask the state conservation department for an explanation of the payment of $50 apiece for six "ghost" articles prepared for staff members of the department for publication in an outdoors magazine recently. The $300 was paid in one instance to a Milwaukee advertising firm, demanding that the department have more publicity men—presumably able to write for publication—on its payroll than any other agency in the capitol, men drawing pay ranging from $330 to $150 a month.

STORY
Public men of Governor Heil's temperament inevitably inspire many anecdotes. During the last five or six months the capitol has been full of yarns about the governor, many of them apocryphal, probably.

One going the rounds now, and contributed to this column by a teacher who considered it exceptionally good, goes like this:

The governor and a Madison businessman of Republican leanings met factually during their chat, the governor asked:

"What do the people think of my administration so far, Joe?"

And Joe replied:

"Nuts."

To which the governor said: "I was afraid so."

DIVERSION FOOTNOTE

In the current diversion feature of the Heil revenue program, a curiously overlooked fact is that earlier in the session the Republicans in the assembly were almost unanimously recorded in favor of the Rice bill, which proposed to make it illegal for any administration to use highway monies for anything but highways, and that the Yindra resolution for a constitutional amendment for the same purpose has already passed both houses of the legislature.

POT-POURRI

Some people think that the yarn about Walter Kohler's projected candidacy for the senate against Bob LaFollette has bobbed into print often enough now to warrant a denial from the former governor. It is groundless. . . . Assemblyman Nick Biehler of Belgium is making plans to capture the senate seat now held by Harry Bolens. . . . Has anyone noticed that Phil LaFollette has yet to make his first public comment on the doings of the Heil regime? . . . The

NERVOUS EXHAUSTION

Before we begin quarreling let me say candidly that in my opinion there is no such thing as nerve energy, nerve exhaustion, nerve tension, nervous breakdown or neurasthenia. If you think you know better you may as well stop here, and I'll carry on with our less erudite readers who don't know so much. Of course I'm just a common, ordinary Joe and even in my heyday I never had the gall to charge a patient ten dollars for a dollar's worth of medical service. But aside from that I've been around and I've delved more or less in ancient and modern medical literature. So far as the "high tension" of life here in Yankee-land is concerned, the heavy drain on strain on nervous "energy" in this and that field of professional or business endeavor, the exhausting effect of large business or other responsibilities, it is my earnest belief that all this is a lot of hooey.

As a disciple of Hippocrates I must teach what I believe is the truth about "exhausted nerves." I believe the idea is exploited far too much in lieu of an honest diagnosis by the regular medical profession.

Some time ago a letter from a reader was printed here, telling how her daughter, about to begin college, had been unable to begin college because she suffered with "chronic fatigue" which seemed impossible to overcome. The mother finally tried feeding the girl an iodine ration, as I recommend for every man, woman and child not under medical care. The family doctor approved of this. "The result has been simply unbelievable," wrote the mother. "The doctor told me to continue it, since it seemed to benefit her so much. She is starting in . . . college Monday and is very happy. She was so tired all the time that she couldn't enjoy life as other young people do, and now she's bubbling over most of the time."

I repeat, I advise every man, woman and child who is not under medical care or not in obvious need of medical care, to take a suitable iodine ration. I have a monograph of instructions for this—ask for it and inclose a stamped envelope bearing your address. Do NOT send a clipping of this item.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Hernia
I am another reader who took your advice. . . . had a hard time finding a reliable doctor who gives the ambulant treatment, but finally my dentist told me that Dr. . . . does fine work, and now I can testify that he does. I had carried my hernia for eight years. . . . nothing but praise for the practical value of your articles. (F. B.)
Answer—I have a monograph on Hernia—for copy send a stamped and half cent stamped envelope bearing your address. If you ask a question requiring individual answer, put a 3-cent stamp on return envelope.

Bunion
Is bunion a growth, sort of an aggravated corn? (Mrs. P. G. T.)
Answer—No, it is a deformity. Correction is given in booklet "Care of the Feet"—for copy send ten cents coin and stamped envelope bearing your address.

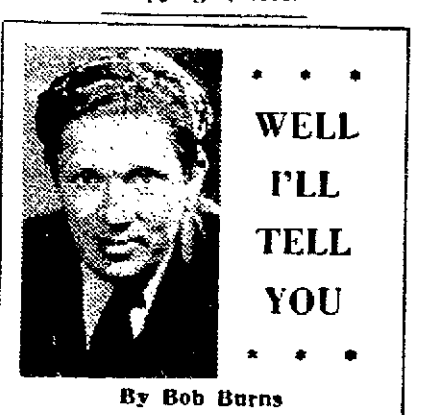

Tularemia
Can a person get rabbit fever

from drinking raw milk or eating raw vegetables in salads, etc.? (Mrs. B. H.)

Answer—No. Tularemia is usually contracted by handling, skinning, dressing rabbit, sometimes other wild game, that have the disease—evidenced chiefly by little white spots scattered through the liver. Tularemia is sometimes conveyed from rabbit or other wild animal to man in the bite of the wood tick or other parasite. Tame rabbits are not susceptible to tularemia. Beware of the wild rabbit or other game that fails to run from danger as a normal animal does.

Varicose Veins
Please advise whether the injection treatment of varicose veins is safe and successful. (Miss T. K. S.)
Answer—Yes, in the hands of a competent physician. Send stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for monograph on Varicose Veins and Varicose Ulcer.

Dr. Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. Writers' names are never printed. Only inquiries of general interest will be answered by mail. If written in ink and a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed, Requests for diagnosis or treatment of individual cases cannot be considered. I've noticed that practically everything has changed since I was a youngster, except romance. That's just the same. Of course, the methods of courtin' nowadays are much different. I guess when my boy gets to sparkin' he'll be an airplane parker. I was a porch swinger.

Uncle Slug and Aunt Pudgy have had a beautiful romance ever since they started keepin' company sixteen years ago. On the days his gonna get up nerve enough to propose. But durin' all that time his love for her has increased. When he first met her he use to tell her good-night by kissing her on the chin. And he still does it, except that now it takes a little longer for him to say goodnight—he's got to kiss four chins!

The Consistent Advertiser Gets The Best Results

It pays to advertise consistently! Daily insertions add to the prestige and reputation of the advertiser, for they indicate that he has day-in-and-day-out values for Appleton Area shoppers—values that are important enough to be publicized. Lack of advertising creates a negative impression — it implies that the merchant has no values worth advertising. Advertise in the Post-Crescent every day to attract Appleton Area shoppers every day!

The headline to this advertisement isn't merely a catchy but meaningless jingle — the thought it expresses is really based on the soundest logic and soundest merchandising, as a moment of reflection will prove. For it stands to reason that before a merchant can make a sale to a customer he must attract that customer into his store.

Every merchant knows the value of location — he knows that if his store is situated on a street which has considerable sidewalk traffic his business will vary in proportion to this traffic. He knows, too that this takes place because potential customers are attracted by his offerings displayed in his windows. He sees to it that his windows TELL passersby that he has money-saving values for them.

Post-Crescent advertising offers all the advantages of an ideal "traffic" location and more. It is the modern magic carpet which daily transports more than 17,000 Appleton Area families on a tour of advertisers' stores. It is the medium by which the greatest number of potential customers can be TOLD at the least cost.

And Post-Crescent advertising sells 'em as it tells 'em. These 17,000 families have found that it is a reliable index to authentic values. That it gives them a chance to compare price and quality . . . that it saves them time and trouble and money . . . that it enables them to do their marketing in an easy chair. It sells 'em, furthermore, because it finds them in a receptive mood...at home.

Mr. Merchant, the Appleton Area families are waiting to be told and sold daily. Use the Post-Crescent — the most efficient and most economical advertising medium — to tell 'em and sell 'em!

In Class A and B pulling contests, which will be open to teams weighing under 3,000 pounds and over 3,000 pounds respectively, a dynamometer for measuring the pull, owned and operated by the University of Wisconsin, will be used. A tractive pull of 200 pounds will equal lifting 2,000 pounds straight up out of a well, pulling four 14-inch plows six inches deep in clay loam, starting a wagon of 2,000 pounds on concrete pavement and 10-horse power when extended from 2 1/2 feet in 10 seconds.

Prizes in each class will be $15 for first, $10 for second and $5 for third places. R. W. Harness and Earl Hughes will be the judges for the contests.

Teams entering the contests must be weighed in at the city hall scale, starting at 8 o'clock in the morning, and the drivers' owners must present the weigh slip to the operator of the dynamometer. Drivers must ride on and drive from the seat, and whipping or any other form of abuse, slapping with the lines or noisemaking of any kind other than shouting by the driver will be prohibited.

Each team will have three trials, and pulling the machine the standard distance of 2 1/2 feet in one continuous pull will qualify the teams for the next night, and the team pulling the heaviest load the greatest distance wins first in its class.

Law Is Effective
Aldermen Carl Loehning pointed out that the ordinance has been effective, for there has been a minimum of shooting.

The council also decided not to "let any bars down" in the ordinance. It was reported that merchants would like to display their merchandise, but the majority of the aldermen agreed that it was better to let things stand as they are, pointing out that the displays would be a temptation.

The council also discussed the perger Market to use a section of the public parking space at the rear of the store for loading the firm's trucks. It was pointed out that with the installation of a concrete street on E. Canal street, it would be preferable to let the firm use the parking space than to park its trucks on the street, blocking traffic and creating a hazard.

Doll Show Postponed

The Memorial park doll show and parade, it was announced, has been postponed until July 13. It had been planned to hold an all-city doll show and parade, but it was canceled because of the problem of transporting the girls, buggies and dolls. Each playground, however, will have a separate doll show.

A croquet tournament will be held starting Thursday at Memorial park, and children and adults are eligible to participate in their respective age groups, 8 to 10 years, 11 to 12, 13 to 15, and 16 and over. All entries should be made at the Memorial park bulletin board and they will be received until Wednesday night. Pairings will be made Thursday morning.

Other activities for next week include a swimming class from 3 o'clock until 5 Thursday afternoon, and Mrs. Harriet Callahan will conduct classes in ballroom dancing and play acting. The dramatic class is planning a 1-act play and a group of novelty dances which will be presented at the close of the playground season.

WPA Projects to Start Wednesday, Engineer Is Told

Neenah—City Engineer A. G. Prunuske today received notification from Richard Williams, Oshkosh, WPA area engineer, that works progress administration projects would be resumed in Neenah Wednesday morning, July 5.

A complete shutdown of WPA projects in Neenah and Winnebago county, affecting about 1,200 persons, with the end of the fiscal year at midnight Friday caused considerable alarm among officials and workers, especially when an order directing men to report for work July 1 was rescinded.

There are about 70 men on WPA projects in Neenah, and the city WPA sidewalk installation and repair program, which involves nearly 100,000 square feet of new sidewalks, got underway last week.

Preparations were underway this morning for laying of new sidewalks on S. Lake street, a 35,510-square foot job. Crews finished water main installation on Elm street and another crew had completed installation of curbs and gutters on Eleventh street this week, and some sidewalk repair work was being done on the island.

Name John Heigl, Charles Korotev On Review Board

Neenah — Alderman John Heigl and Supervisor Charles Korotev were appointed aldermanic and supervisory members of the board of review at a special meeting of the city council last night at the city hall.

The board of review will meet at 10 o'clock Monday morning in the city hall, and the meeting probably will be adjourned until July 17.

Following the special session, the council met informally to discuss other governmental matters. City Attorney John W. O'Leary reported that he had received complaints that the boat-houses on the west end of Clark street near Second street, which extend into the Fox river, were a nuisance. He said that the complainants reported that the houses cause an eddy in the current and accumulate refuse. The matter was referred to the committee on police, fire and health for investigation.

Several of the aldermen expressed their satisfaction with the results of the fireworks ordinance which limits the exposing for sale, selling and shooting of fireworks to July 3 and 4.

Law Is Effective
Aldermen Carl Loehning pointed out that the ordinance has been effective, for there has been a minimum of shooting.

The council also decided not to "let any bars down" in the ordinance. It was reported that merchants would like to display their merchandise, but the majority of the aldermen agreed that it was better to let things stand as they are, pointing out that the displays would be a temptation.

The council also discussed the perger Market to use a section of the public parking space at the rear of the store for loading the firm's trucks. It was pointed out that with the installation of a concrete street on E. Canal street, it would be preferable to let the firm use the parking space than to park its trucks on the street, blocking traffic and creating a hazard.

Menasha Man Fined For Reckless Driving

Neenah—Clarence Malchow, 411 Pine street, Menasha, was fined $10 and costs when he pleaded guilty of reckless driving when arraigned before Justice of the Peace Gaylord C. Loehning Friday afternoon.

Municipal Beach Will Remain Open, Officials Decide

June 20 Test Insufficient To Warrant Action, Committee Holds

Neenah — The municipal bathing beach will remain open, it was decided at a meeting of the council committee on parks and public buildings last night at the city hall.

It was pointed out at the meeting that the test of water by the state laboratory at Oshkosh showed that on June 20 there was a B. Coli index of 1,000, which gives the water a C rating. Since the test was made, the water has cleaned itself to some extent, it was said.

The B. Coli index, which shows the presence of bacteria usually found in the intestines, has varied from 510 to 10,000 per 100 cubic centimeters of water since the test was made, the count varying as much as 8,000 from one day to another. Members of the committee said they felt that it isn't logical to close the beach on the evidence of the test of one sample of water when the daily record of the chemist at the water works plant shows that the sanitary conditions, namely the coli index, of the water varies greatly from day to day and is the same as it has been on an average for the last three summers.

It also was pointed out that there are some children as well as adults who are swimming daily and would continue to swim whether the beach is closed. To protect these persons as well as public property and also to accommodate the anticipated increase in swimmers on hot days, the beach will remain open and available to those who care to use it.

Despite cold and rainy weather, several days of green water, and the absence of many boys and girls who are at camps outside the city, there have been 4,734 bathers at the beach this summer.

Four rescues have been made by the life guards and 23 minor cases were given first aid.

Hull Renews His Plea for Repeal Of Arms Embargo

ly had expressed "deep disappointment" at the house action, remarking unsmilingly:

"Well, the congress has refused to follow the recommendations of the state department."

Referring pointedly to European tension, Hull said he "must continue to urge" the embargo repeal be submitted to chairman of senate and house foreign committees May 27.

This proposal, the secretary said, was "not only best calculated to keep this nation out of war in the event war comes, but also, what is all-important at this time, best calculated to make a far greater contribution than could the present law or its equivalent toward the discouragement of the outbreak of war."

G.O.P. Leads Revolt

The house revolt, led by Republican critics of the administration's proposal, wrote into the neutrality bill a provision that "arms and munitions" should be embargoed in event of war.

This left out the additional embargo provision against "implements of war" provided in the present law but there were differing opinions on just what constituted such implements.

Some house members argued that the measure would, in effect, prevent shipment to warring nations of guns and shells while permitting shipment of such things as trucks, airplanes and other machines essential to a modern army.

Hull indicated that despite the house upset the administration would renew its embargo repeal fight in the senate where it faces determined opposition from a group long opposed to President Roosevelt's foreign policies.

Emphasis on Points

The secretary's statement was a re-indorsement of these six recommendations contained in his letter to Pittman (D-Nev.), chairman of the senate committee, and Bloom (D-N. Y.), chairman of the house committee:

1. Prohibit American ships from carrying combat arms. The house stripped from the pending bill a provision which would have authorized the president to designate such areas and order American ships to stay out.
2. Restrict travel by American citizens in combat areas. (The bill provides that Americans traveling on vessels of belligerent nations do so at their own risk.)
3. Provide that before a belligerent can have American goods exported it must obtain title to them. (The bill includes this.)
4. Continue existing legislation on loans and credits to nations at war. (The bill would prohibit such loans, while giving the president authority to permit regular commercial credits up to $100,000.)
5. Regulate solicitation and collection in the United States of funds for warring nations. (The bill prohibits solicitation.)
6. Continue the national munitions control board and the system of arms export and import licenses. (The bill provides for this.)

New Crop of College Grads Is Facing Real Job Problem

BY WESTBROOK FEGLER

New York — The number of young men and women who are being unloaded onto an overcrowded job market as the college crop of 1939 is about a quarter of a million, just about equal to the total enrollment of regular college students in 1910 and four times the graduation class of that year. They emerge into a world in which a college education is no longer a distinction, as it was in 1910. A story is told of a new office boy in a New York newspaper shop who was asked to fill in a data form for the office files and in the space marked "home address" wrote "The Harvard Club."

Aside from the depression which members of the New Deal finally are coming to call more and more baldly "the collapse of American capitalism," and aside from the factor known as technological displacement, the graduates of today are embarrassed by their own numbers. They constitute a huge mass, and for all that is said about the exploitation of child labor, they find that business, work and affairs are in the hands of older people, most of whom did not go to college but came in grips with life, as the professors say, several years younger.

It has been suggested that the timing of education, like the automatic timing of a 3-minute egg, is a mistake and that the jam of fresh-taught talent could be alleviated by the wider adoption of a method which would certify students and trickle them out throughout the year. This would seriously impair the solemnity and horseplay of graduation exercises and reunions, and the gain might not be worth the sacrifice of those who deliver inspirational talks and receive honorary degrees. It is just a suggestion which has been tossed out by some educators in a hope that an appreciable portion of the graduating classes would be subtracted from the jam that occurs in June.

Oldsters Play Ball For Mutual Protection

The prejudice exists no longer, and its disappearance is due in large part to the willing enthusiasm of the new graduates to tackle almost any sort of work and at small wages. But there is acute job fear among the older men, particularly the uneducated or non-educated, who have risen to the top of their earning powers and are now hanging on, knowing that if they should lose out they might be on the street for months or years. Men of this class have a clannish disposition to play ball out of old friendship and for mutual protection.

Impatience and discouragement must harass the graduates first year out of college even in the best of times, however. He is not a boy now, but a man, but he comes into the job market as a beginner at a time when he must pick up the duty of supporting his own family or the leftovers of his father's responsibilities and do it on the pay of a high-learned but inexperienced novice.

There is more than mere nostalgia to the oft-repeated fact that the fathers and mothers of this year's graduates were married and had children and an economic start at a time of life when these youths were still going to school. There is a wide blank spot between adolescence and the start of adult responsibility in the life of the large and highly intelligent section of American youth which constitutes the student body.

Dear Madam:
Could you use one more quart of milk per week? If you knew that such a move on your part would help in solving the economic problems of the dairy farmers, who are supplying this market with milk, we believe you would be willing and glad to co-operate in such a movement.
If we can get the co-operation of every household, it will go a long way in eliminating the surplus of milk — a surplus that now has to be converted into butter, cheese and other dairy products — to be dumped on an already overstocked market, and further reduce the present low prices on those products.
Every time you buy an extra quart of milk, an extra bottle of cream, etc., you are helping in eliminating this surplus, and also helping in making life more liveable for the dairy farmer and his family. Let's make their well-being our concern!

Studies Salary Basis Plan for Department

A plan to put a number of Outagamie county highway department workers on a salary basis to save the county from paying some unemployment compensation is being studied by Arnold Krueger, county highway commissioner. Krueger said that perhaps about 50 men are needed the year around and that if they were on a salary instead of an hourly wage basis, payment of unemployment compensation insurance would be unnecessary.

During the summer months some of the workmen, especially if they happen to be on the oiling project, get overtime, but during slack seasons are laid off. They then receive unemployment compensation. Under the salary plan the men would not be eligible for unemployment as they would remain on the pay roll during the slack periods.

Hollywood—The close of another school year—and another flock of starry-eyed young hopefuls swooping down on Hollywood to win fame and fortune in the movies.

Their arrival follows graduation exercises each year with monotonous regularity and they never seem daunted by a discouraging reception. One found her way to my office armed with a letter of introduction from a newspaper man back east. She wanted me to arrange an interview for her with Darryl Zanuck. Louis B. Mayer would do in a pinch, though. And I know she regarded my plea of inability to help as a discourteous snub, and blamed me personally for the inconvenient fact that Mr. Zanuck happens to be in Washington.

Not one of them but confidently expects to be an overnight sensation. They contemplate no period of training and scorn any suggestion of less than a directorship or stardom. And they linger on in Hollywood, beating their young wings futilely against the flame of their dream until their money gives out and it's go back home or starve.

I don't suppose it does a bit of good to offer discouragement, but the fact remains that Hollywood already has more trained workers than it can possibly use. And it simply isn't taking anyone unless they come ready equipped to out-do those already here. If these fledglings really want to become professional actors and actresses—the Lord only knows why—their best approach to Hollywood is the Little Theatre in their own neighborhood. The gates there are not hard to open and Hollywood combs those talent woods with a fine tooth comb.

BOOK REVIEW Zweig's Novel Written Well, But it Is Not Happy Reading

By Jean Wiley Thieckens

Stefan Zweig is known to many thousands of readers as the author of three masterly biographies, "Mary Queen of Scotland," "The Story of Magellan," and "Marie Antoinette." In "Beware of Pity," his first novel, he has let his readers down. The book is a study in abnormal psychology which leaves a decidedly bitter taste in the reader's mouth.

The author states in a brief preface that there are two kinds of pity, "one the weak and sentimental kind, which is really no more than the heart's impatience to be rid as quickly as possible of the painful emotion aroused at the sight of another's unhappiness. The other type, the only kind that counts, the sentimental and creative kind, knows what it is about and is determined to hold out to the very limit of its strength and even beyond."

The Austro-Hungarian army preceding the World war which—snatched so many traditions and customs—was a highly homogeneous body composed of a large number of races. The caste system in the Austro-Hungarian army was developed to such a ridiculous point that fellow officers in the same regiment, when not at the same point of advancement, always addressed each other formally in the third person plural. The final criterion of an Austrian army officer's behavior was not the moral code of society in general, but the special code of his caste. This led to frequent mental conflicts, one of which plays an important part in this book.

The author tells us that the story he relates in his novel is true and was related to him almost verbatim by a casual stranger whom he encountered at a large dinner given for both men by a mutual friend.

Crippled Girl Is Heroine
The plot of Stefan Zweig's novel in brief is as follows: Young Lieutenant Hofmiller is invited to a dance at the home of a Hungarian count. His host's pretty young daughter, whom he has never met before, is seated in front of a small coffee table talking to friends when the Herr Lieutenant comes up, bows before her and requests the next dance. She bursts into tears and not until later does he discover that the young girl is a hopeless cripple, since an attack of infantile paralysis suffered in her early teens. Horrified at his mistake and at having wounded her feelings, he calls at the Schloss the following day to try and make amends. This first afternoon call is followed by many others and eventually becomes the one bright spot in Edith's unhappy and discouraged existence.

When young Hofmiller discovers that Edith has fallen passionately in love with him—having mistaken his pity for love—he is horrified and flies to Vienna to consult her physician, a famous orthopedic surgeon who is also a psychoanalyst of repute.

The outcome of this unhappy romance is inevitable and the author stresses repeatedly the danger of uncontrolled pity. The story is told with sympathy and restraint but it is evident that the author finds his subject a distasteful one and this revelation is unconsciously communicated to the reader "Beware of Pity" is a fine piece of writing but decidedly not the type of novel one would select if he wished merely to be amused.

Night Baseball Will Make Debut

Inaugural Game to be Played Under Lights Sunday Evening

Becher Taverns, Athletics to Settle Superiority Dispute

APPLETON is doing its part to observe baseball's one hundredth birthday by making night games available to local fans. Dedication of the new lights at Spencer street field will get underway about 8:15 Sunday evening with an informal ceremony and will feature a game between two leading Appleton baseball teams.

Mayor John Goodland, Jr., will toss the first ball and will try to get it past Alderman George Brautigan at the plate. Gordon McIntyre, sports editor of the Appleton Post-Crescent, will don the big mitt while former Alderman R. H. Kubitz will serve as umpire.

Brautigan, who has been identified with baseball in Appleton for more than 25 years, is chairman of the city council committee on recreational activities. Kubitz was chairman of the committee when the purchase and installation of the lighting equipment was recommended.

Topnotch Diamond
The new lights give Appleton one of the best diamonds for night baseball in the state. Louis Luebke, city electrician, supervised the installation. The total cost of the equipment is approximately $3,500. Becher Taverns of the Fox and Valley League and the Athletics of the Winnebago League will play in the inaugural game. Both teams boast plenty of talent and the merits of the two squads has been a topic of much debate.

Supporters of the two squads have been claiming superiority for their respective teams all season and the game has been arranged to settle the argument.

Manager Wally Murphy of the tavern team will start Cliff Burton or Hunter Lake on the mound and Hank Stein, a newcomer, will do the catching. Both of the pitchers are well known. Stein is a polished catcher who has proven popular with the fans.

Tavern Infield
The tavern infield will show Cy Burton at third, Orv Wosner at shortstop, Ralph Mueller on the keystone sack and Bob Cotton, a leading slugger, at first base. Mel Pope is the only outfielder certain of his berth. Norm LaMar has been looking good and may get the call for centerfield. Tom Murphy, Glenn Bowers and Ray Rippl will fight it out for the third outfield post.

"Big Bill" Nofke, who has been mighty stingy with hits this season, will get the pitching assignment of the Athletics, who are in league play. His teammates will be at somewhat of a disadvantage for they meet Oshkosh in a doubleheader in the afternoon while Becher Taverns play Manitowoc in a morning game.

Showing in the Athletic infield will be N. Kirk at first, O. Kirk at second, L. Grishaber at shortstop, Paul Grishaber at third, E. Horn will do the receiving. The outfield will have G. Swamp, F. Kroiss and R. Dietzen. The Athletics are batting .304 so far this season.

Looks Like Jack Dempsey Has Licked Another Dangerous Foe

BY BILL BONI

New York—(AP)—A tough scrapper in or out of the ring, Jack Dempsey today appeared to have licked a stiffer competition than he ever would have got from John L. Sullivan, Gene Tunney and Joe Louis rolled into one.

Early this morning Ned Brown, his secretary, emerged from the former heavyweight champion's room at Polyclinic hospital, with word that the old Manassa Mauler was calling for food in loud tones. Asked to be more specific, Brown said Dempsey demanded: "When the hell do you eat around here?"

Off that sort of evidence, plus the fact of hospital bulletins said he was resting comfortably and his temperature was approaching normal, it appeared Dempsey was just as hard to whip at 44 as he was 20 years ago, when he won the heavyweight title from Jess Willard July 4.

Late Thursday night Dempsey was rushed to the hospital for an emergency appendectomy. Nearly all day yesterday, while telegrams and phone calls were coming into the hospital and to Jack's restaurant just around the corner, there were all sorts of grave reports on his condition. But Dempsey, who upset the experts' apple carts the day he beat Willard to a pulp, did just as thorough a job on the alarmists.

Officially, however, the big fellow was not yet out of danger. Dr. Robert Emery Brennan, head of the Polyclinic surgical staff who performed the operation, does not expect to issue any statement along these lines until 72 hours have passed, which should be around 9 or 10 o'clock tomorrow night.

Chairs Trim Power Company; Weller Looking for Recruits

Wanted—Some softball players. Apply to Hilbert J. (Kelly) Weller, Power company.

Preparing for a game with the Iron Mountain team of the Wisconsin Michigan Power company, the local division squad took on the Chair Factory of the American Industrial league in a game at Roosevelt school diamond last evening and took it on the chin to the tune of 22 to 14 in a wild hitting affair. The Chairs, incidentally, are at the bottom of the American league with eight straight defeats.

In summing up, there was a total of 36 runs, 39 hits and 20 errors. Weller has his suspicions about Clem Antonetti, a transfer from the northern division who had the boys sold on his ability as a player. Whether Antonetti really is a good player or is merely a team player, Weller is puzzled, for the team committed 8 of the 13 errors. After throwing wide from shortstop to first base a number of times, Antonetti was shifted to the mound. Here he allowed 10 runs in 3 innings on 10 hits and 5 walks. He then was switched to catch where he gave the Chairs four runs in the sixth by throwing the ball to centerfield.

P. S. Having asserted its superiority in bowling, the Post-Crescent is organizing a softball team and today challenged the Powers to a game. Weller readily accepted the challenge and mumbled something about "fish." The newspaper boys say they'll make him eat those words.

Zuidmulder walloped a home run in the fourth inning with Clusman aboard to knot the count at 2 to 2 and Green Bay tallied the winning run in the eighth frame. Seymour scored in the first and third innings but Schuster, tight-ended up and held his opponents scoreless the balance of the route. Schuster fanned 11 and walked three while giving up five hits. BITTER RIVALS
Manitowoc—There will be plenty of action at the Fairgrounds Sunday afternoon when Manager Al Borth's Shipbuilders cross bats with the Polar Bears from Two Rivers in a Northern State League game.

It is always rough going when these bitter baseball rivals meet. The Cool City squad is already two up on the Ships but the Manitowoc clubbers are determined to get even this weekend.

Lucy Alberts will probably do the tossing for Two Rivers while Geis, Kluckman has been nominated for the Ships.

First Doubleheader
The first doubleheader of the season will be on tap at Seymour with the revamped New London Bulldogs providing the opposition. Both clubs are well fortified with starters and the fans should be treated to a couple of topnotch arguments.

Len Goringler and Co. from Clintonville will display their baseball wares in Green Bay against the Sox Sunday night. The pace setters have tumbled Clusman's hirings twice this season and a fool confident of doing it again, Ruben Schuster, former Milwaukee

Service to be Stressed in Post-Crescent Tennis School Classes; Girls, Women are To Report Wednesday Instead of Tuesday

THE third in the series of tennis lessons sponsored by the Appleton Post-Crescent at the new high school courts will be conducted next week by George LaBorde, Oshkosh. The right and wrong of serving the ball will be arranged.

The girls' and women's classes will be shifted from Tuesday to Wednesday at the usual hours because of the Fourth of July holiday. Boys and men will report for instruction Monday afternoon and evening. J. LaBorde and William C. Pickett will continue to assist LaBorde.

The service is one of the most important phases of the game because many points hinge on the success of the stroke. It has been demonstrated that the person who serves has a slight playing advantage and is most apt to win the game. The person who serves wins the game he serves well. The given little chance of winning the set or match. Too, it makes the game more enjoyable when a person serves so that the ball can be returned, instead of losing the point on "doubles."

Describes Method
Following is a description by LaBorde of the proper way to serve: A good service should be one that has a fair amount of speed and turns one over which you have control and are able to hit to any part of the service court you wish, and one that you can use during a long hard fought match without undue strain and fatigue.

You have two chances to serve the ball into the proper court. Do it with your first shot trying for a kill and then put the second one. But rather hit the first ball a little flatter if you wish, but use about the same speed to swing on both.

Of course there is a place in tennis tactics for such services as the American Twist and "Cannon Ball," but I believe a beginner will do well to concentrate on a flat service with moderate speed and the slice service.

Use Same Grip
Remember that you use the same grip for your service as you use for your forehand drive.

The first fundamental is placing your feet in the correct position. To do this stand with your left shoulder facing the court into which you wish the service to be made. Have your left foot about six inches behind the base line and your right foot a short comfortable step back from your left. The toes should be at about a 45 degree angle to the baseline.

Tossing the ball up to be hit is of great importance and deserves a lot of practice. Plan to hit the ball directly over your head or left shoulder. If you find that you are not hitting the ball it is best to hit over your head; and if your shots are going long, throw your toss forward over your left shoulder. You want to hit the ball at an arms length so make your toss high enough to allow you to do this. However, do not toss the ball too high. A few inches above the spot where you plan to hit it is ideal. Anything higher will cause you to break your swing because you will have to wait for the ball to come down; and then too, a dropping ball gathers momentum and is much harder to hit.

Start at Same Time
Start your toes and back swing at the same time. Have both hands near each other in front of your waist. As the left hand tosses the ball up the right carries the racket down and backward as far as it will go. Now the arm is brought up with a sweep behind your head and your wrist is bent to permit the racket to drop behind your back—from here upward and forward is the swing. At the same time the weight of your body, which has been shifted to your right foot on the back swing, is moving forward too.

At the moment before you hit the ball your racket head which has been trailing your wrist on the up-snap, the top of your racket should be closer to the net than the racket throat. Now either hit straight down for a flat service, or across the right top side of the ball for a slice service. The slice service will not be quite as fast but it will impart a drop to the ball that will aid you in placing your service with the service court.

Follow through in the direction you wish the ball to go, then continue the swing over to your left side as this will help you to keep your balance and get ready for the next shot.

Be sure that you bring your shoulder and weight into the swing. Keep on your toes. If you wish, you may pivot on your left toe after the ball is hit.

If my explanation seems complicated just remember this—Serve and pitching a baseball are very nearly alike. So try and stand and throw your racket at the ball about the same as a baseball pitcher throws the ball.

Errors Costly to Chisox in Opener With Detroit '9'

Chicago Muffs Chance to Climb Past Tigers Into 4th Place

DETROIT—(AP)—Errors by Catcher Mike Tresh and Shortstop Luke Appling in the first inning Friday cost the Chicago White Sox the opener of a four game series with Detroit and a chance to climb past the Tigers into fourth place by a 3 to 1 score.

Barney McCosky scored the first Detroit run when Tresh's attempt to catch him off second resulted in a wild throw into center field, and Pete Fox came home with the winning run as Appling fumbled Earl Averil's grounder. The Tigers made only six hits off John Duncan Rigney, but bunched three of them in the third for another run.

Buck Newsom scattered eight Chicago safeties to win his eighth victory of the season, leaving 11 of the Sox stranded on base.

Appling was banished in the fifth for disputing Umpire Eddie Romo's decision on a third strike, and Romo charged Pitcher Edgar Smith from the Chicago dugout for heckling.

Leagues Name All-Star Nines

National Club Nearly Same That Won in 1938; Hartnett Pilot

NEW YORK—(AP)—When the National league's All-Stars square off against the American league July 11 at Yankee stadium, Manager Leo (Gabby) Hartnett will be able to field practically the same team that gained a 4-1 victory for the senior circuit at Cincinnati last year.

In 1938, the Nationals used Bill Lee, Stan Hack and Billy Herman of the Chicago Cubs; Johnny Vander Meer, Ival Goodman, Frank McCormick and Ernie Lombardi of the Cincinnati Reds; Joe Medwick and Leo Durocher of the St. Louis Cardinals; Mel Ott of the New York Giants and Mace Brown of the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Giants' Hank Leiber appeared as the lone pinch-hitter.

Of all that array, only Leiber, Durocher and Brown failed to win places on this year's 25-man squad. Lombardi, McCormick and Medwick were unanimously chosen by the league's eight managers, while Medwick, Herman and Ott will be playing in the all-star game for the seventh straight year, together with Arkie Vaughan of the Pirates. Hartnett, a player in the previous six games, gets in this time as pilot.

It is largely a defensive team that has been put at Leo the Lion's disposal, for in making their choices the managers obviously kept in mind that errorless defensive play played an important part in their victory last year.

From The Reds
The roster includes seven players from the league-leading Reds, five from the Cardinals, four from the Dodgers, three each from the Cubs and Giants, and one each from the Phillies, Boston Bees and Pirates.

The roster:
Pitchers—Paul Derringer, Johnny Vander Meer and Bucky Walters, Cincinnati; Lou Fette, Boston; Bill Lee, Chicago; Curt Davis and Lonnie Warneke, St. Louis; Whitlow Wyatt, Brooklyn.

Catchers—Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati; Babe Phelps, Brooklyn; Harry Danning, New York.

Infielders—Stan Hack and Billy Herman, Chicago; Frank McCormick and Linus Fry, Cincinnati; Wolf Camilli and Harry Lavagetto, Brooklyn; Arky Vaughan, Pittsburgh; Bill Jurges, New York; Johnny Mize, St. Louis.

Outfielders—Joe Medwick and Terry Moore, St. Louis; Mel Ott, New York; Morrie Aronovich, Philadelphia; Ival Goodman, Cincinnati.

Aronovich, a unanimous selection, and Fette, Wyatt, Fry, Camilli and Moore will be playing in their first all-star game.

Makes Doubled Bid but Loses On 'Misdeal'

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Yesterday and Thursday I described the woes of a mere man bridge player who, through no fault of his own, had to play in his wife's regular afternoon game. Naturally enough, perhaps the poor fellow was soundly trounced by the voracious feminine opponents and brutally excoriated by his ditto partner. Then, when he was just about ready for self-destruction, along came the following hand:

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

♠ 10 8 4
♥ 10 9 5
♣ K 9 5 3

WEST
♠ A J 5
♥ A K 8 3
♣ A J 7 2

EAST
♠ K 7 6 2
♥ 6 4
♦ A K J 8 6 3

♠ Q 9 5
♦ Q 10 7 4
♣ Q 10 6

The downtrodden male sitting East, the bidding proceeded:

South West North East
Pass 1 club Pass 1 diamond
Pass 1 heart Pass 2 diamonds
Pass 2 no trump Pass 3 diamonds
Double Pass Pass Pass

South went into quite a huddle over her opening lead and finally came up with the six of clubs. The declarer, (probably shaking with rage over his previous humiliation) really gave this hand a beautiful play. He won with the club ace and promptly ruffed a club, then returned to the heart king and ruffed another club. The next lead was to the heart ace and a low heart was ruffed with the eight of trumps. Now the diamond ace was laid down, after which a low spade was led toward dummy and the jack was successfully finessed. The ace and king of spades then were cashed and when South had followed suit, declarer won "home." He led his fourth spade with the realization that South would have to ruff and return a trump up to the king-jack.

Triumph was in our hero's heart as he gloatingly awaited the denouement, when, to his uttermost horror, fate dealt him the unkindest blow of all. At this juncture North spoke up: "O, dear, I have only two cards left." Declarer glared at her and said: "You must have played two cards on the last trick."

"How many cards did you have when you started?" asked South.
"Let me see," began North. "I had a singleton diamond, four hearts to the jack-ten, three spades, and—yes, I had only twelve cards left, because I had only four clubs to the king."

After considerable search it was found that North had been sitting on the five of clubs.

"Misdeal!" cried South, throwing her cards on the table.

"O, no, it isn't!" wailed the about-to-be-gyped declarer. "The hand has to be played out and stands as a good deal."

"Not in this club it doesn't!" snapped South. "We don't play any deals with less than 52 cards. Isn't that right, Alice?"

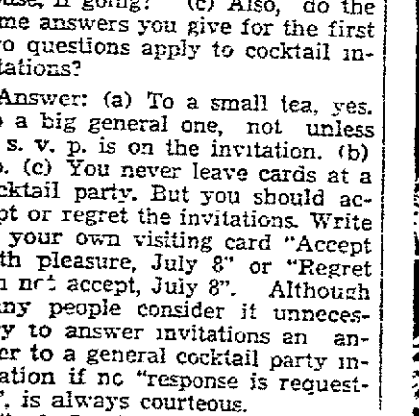

"Yes, I guess so," conceded declarer, somewhat abashed.

And that was what chance dealt the lone man have to make the ladies play according to law? None! They always had followed their own rules and if the poor sap did not like it he could play in some other game!

Henceforth, he did!

ANSWERS TO INVITATIONS
Dear Mrs. Post: (a) Does an invitation to a tea require an answer? (b) In addition to a written reply, are cards supposed to be sent on that day if not going, or left at the house, if going? (c) Also, do the same answers you give for the first two questions apply to cocktail invitations?

Answer: (a) To a small tea, yes. To a big general one, not unless R. S. V. P. is on the invitation. (b) No. (c) You never leave cards at a cocktail party. But you should accept or regret the invitations. Write on your own visiting card "Accept with pleasure, July 8" or "Regret can't accept, July 8." Although many people consider it unnecessary to answer invitations, an answer to a general cocktail party invitation if no "response is requested," is always courteous.

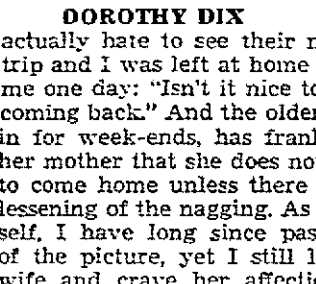

It's A Cruel Answer, But True!
Dear Mrs. Post: I have been very ill and still have not fully recovered. I have just heard that some people have been talking saying that I am making a terrible fuss over my health and that I'm not as sick as I let on. This, I feel, is very unfair and I would like to write to those who are supposed to have spread this story. Will you let me have your opinion?

Answer: Don't think of writing to any one about anything they are supposed to have said. It would merely create an embarrassing situation for everyone and do good to no one. If I were you I would prove the remarks untrue by being careful not to mention my health. To say, "Oh, how you are, say, 'lightly,' 'Oh, ever if you are up and about, 'Very well thank you,' and

Husband Should Tell Nagging Wife to Behave or Get Fired

BY DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix—I have a wife who is as different outside of the home as she is in it as day from night. Abroad she is an attractive, good-looking, intelligent woman who is tactful in dealing with people and makes herself agreeable to all with whom she comes in contact. But the minute she enters the home she drops her pleasant, affable nature at the door and commences to complain and to nag, usually beginning with the children and ending up with a fight against the children when she is unreasonable. I suppose she loves her children in her way, but she is never willing to do anything for their pleasure, and when a youngster of 15 or a son of 20 wants to bring his friends into the home for a meal she refuses, because she says it will be too much trouble, although she frequently entertains her friends and clubs and committees. If the children leave their books or clothes on a chair, she flies into a passion and berates them in her anger. She is so fault-finding that it has come to the place where they that it has come to the place where they actually have to see their mother come home, not long ago she took a trip and I was left at home with two daughters. The younger girl said to me one day: "Isn't it nice to be alone, Daddy? I hate to think of Mother coming back." And the older girl, who works away from home but comes in for week-ends, has frankly told her mother that she does not intend to come home unless there is some lessening of the nagging. As for myself, I have long since passed out of the picture, yet I still love my wife and crave her affection. The last few years have been full of worries and anxieties for me, as they have for all business men, and I would have liked to have come home to a place that was full of peace and happiness and to a wife who would have shown me some affection, but instead of that I have returned at night to a home of strife and a wife who did not give me even a word of welcome. For myself I can say that I have been a faithful husband and a good provider, and my children adore me, and we should have had a happy home if my wife and the children's mother had only co-operated a little with us. Is there any cure for such a situation? A HUSBAND.

DOROTHY DIX

Well, Irene, it is very hard to lay out the pattern of your life when you are 13, because so many things that we don't expect happen to us and because to a great extent we are the sport of circumstances and life molds us more than we mold life.

But to a little girl of 13 I would say that if you want to become a worthy citizen and of value to your country, first of all cultivate high ideals. Formulate a code of honor by which you can shape your life. Keep yourself clean. Have a standard of conduct and stick to it. You may never have thought of it, but the most important people in the world are the little schoolgirls like you. For some day you will be mothers and you will form the characters of the men and women who will rule this land of ours and carry it on to greatness or pull it down into disaster. In your hands lies our destiny.

Then I would urge you to study hard and get the best education you can, for that is the tool with which you will have to carve your way in a world that you will find full of competition. Whether you succeed or whether you fail will depend on how sharp your tools are and how deft you are in handling them. Everybody is willing to pay for expert service and nobody is willing to pay for bungling work. You will have to toil just as hard at a ten-dollar job as you will at a hundred-dollar one, so fit yourself to do the one that carries the big pay envelope.

Decide what you want to do in the world and equip yourself for it. Thirteen is none too young to make up your mind about that and to bend all your studies in school in the direction you wish to go. Don't just drift into any sort of work because you think you will marry and won't have to do it long. May be you won't marry, or maybe you will get a good-for-nothing husband and you will have to support. You never can tell.

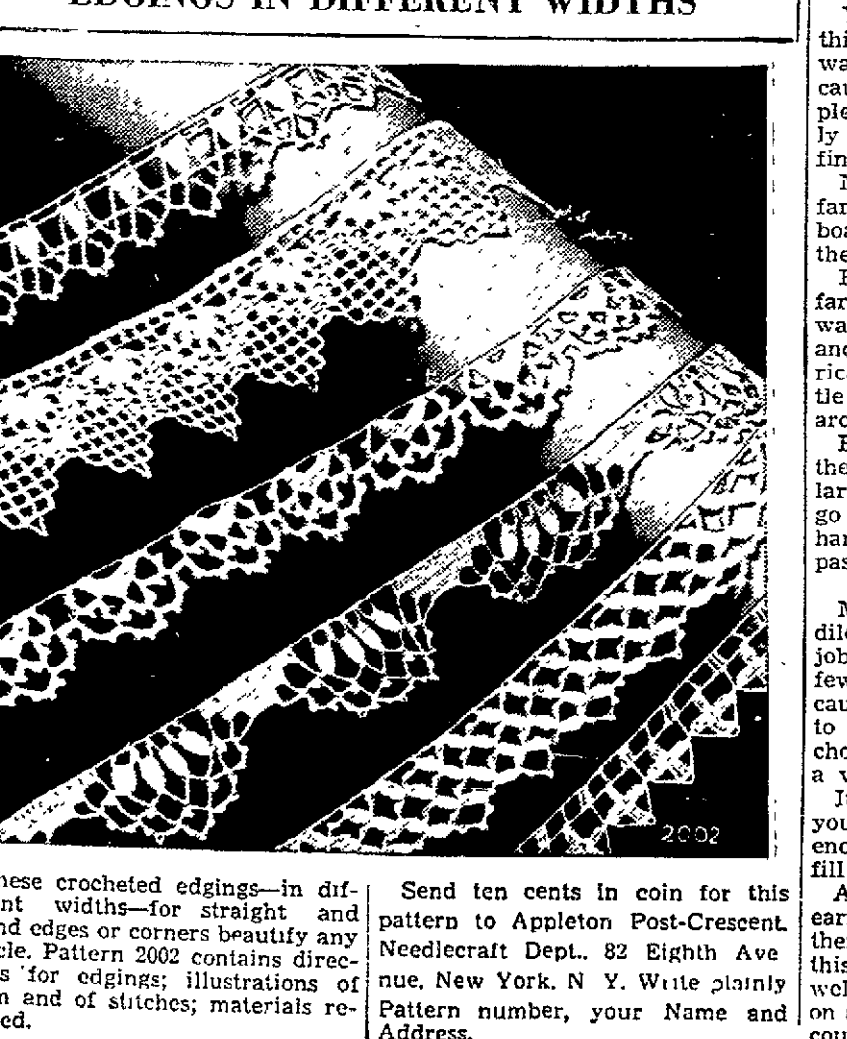

Most likely you will marry, so prepare yourself for that, which is, after all, the great career for which Nature has destined women. If it is possible, take one of the matrimonial courses that are being taught in so many colleges. That will teach you something about picking out a husband and make you think twice before you choose a drunkard or a ne'er-do-well for your children's father.

Learn how to cook and sew because whatever else a woman needs to know she needs to be proficient in these two things. Any woman who can't bake a loaf of bread or knit a dress is an ignoramus, no matter how many college degrees she has. And, most important of all, study yourself. Analyze yourself. Find out what your strong points are so that you can build them up, and your weak points so that you may correct them and strengthen them. Good luck to you, Irene and nice going.

May We Correct Other People's
Dear Mrs. Post: If a child is very rude and unpleasant and the parents do nothing to check his bad behavior, does the hostess have the privilege of saying something to the child for the sake of other guests who are annoyed?

Answer: This is very difficult because ordinarily we do not have the privilege of correcting other people's children. But if parents refuse to look after a child themselves, they leave us no other course than to take the child in hand ourselves, at least so far as is necessary to protect the other guests.

Beauty and You

—by PATRICIA LINDSAY

Playing with fireworks is flirting with blindness for life!

No parent wants his or her child to be numbered among the casualties of the Fourth of July celebration. Yet the American Medical Association reported 8,257 injuries from fireworks and explosives for the celebrating of July 4, 1938! Of these 43 children were blinded in both eyes, 281 were injured in one eye, 7,933 received injuries of other kinds. Terrifying figures, terrifying facts! Eight thousand two hundred and fifty seven families carrying crosses of sorrow which they might have been spared.

No celebration is worth the sacrifice of eyesight and foolishness is the American parent who humors his child's whim for firecrackers on the Day of Independence.

In a survey made on "Eye Hazards in Play," Miss Edith Kerby states this appalling fact:

"Although the season for fireworks is extremely short, the eye damage which they cause is tremendous. By actual count it was found that more eye accidents occurred on or about July 4th than occurred during one hundred days at any other time in the year."

"Knowing this, is it any wonder that we are impatient to have all communities pass ordinances abolishing fireworks?"

No Safe Fireworks
If you are an indulgent parent or guardian and flatter yourself by thinking you buy only "safe" fireworks for the child you adore, read these words of Lewis H. Carr, General Director of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness:

"There is no such thing as safe and sane fireworks; even so-called harmless sparklers have killed or injured many children. There will be no safe and sane Fourth until it is impossible for a little child to buy or otherwise secure fireworks of any kind."

Parents Double Responsibility
If you are a parent you have a double responsibility to your child. First you must see that he does not have fireworks this coming Fourth; secondly, you should teach your child to save and protect his eyesight, not only by avoiding dangerous toys and games, but by teaching him how to read in a good light, when to rest his eyes, and their cleanliness and care. Periodic eye examination as a "must" for his welfare.

Instructive Bookmark Free
If you will send a self-addressed stamped (3-cent) envelope eight inches long you may have an attractive bookmark for your child which gives seven simple rules for reading correctly. There is space for his own name and address to be written on it and most children will adore having it to mark their reading place. The envelope you send must be eight inches long or otherwise the bookmark will have to be folded.

Intelligence is defined as the ability to adjust successfully to one's environment. If you can get a job and hold it, win a wife and rear a family, then you demonstrate more intelligence than the college graduate who is a misfit in society or a hapless cherub as described below.

CASE N-178: Mervin W., aged 21, is a college graduate.

"But my school honors and diploma don't seem to do me much good right now," he complained.

"You were out a pair of shoes just walking around from one firm to another in search of a job."

"They all tell me that business is slack, but they would be glad to hire me if conditions warranted it. Sometimes they ask me to fill out a questionnaire blank."

"Dr. Crane isn't there any work for an able bodied man?"

DIAGNOSIS:
Yes, there is plenty of work in this country, but many men don't want to stoop to manual labor because they have a white collar complex, while others who would gladly do pick and shovel labor cannot find an employer for their services.

New England is full of little farms with doors and windows boarded up, and nobody living on the land or cultivating it.

Here in the Middle West the farmers want hired hands, but farm wages are only $30 to $50 per month and one's keep. Sometimes a married hired hand may be given a little cottage with an acre of ground around it and a chicken house.

But how do farmers know, expect their money's worth for every dollar they pay in wages. They don't go in for this learning on shovel handles, so widely popularized the past six or eight years.

Modern Youth Is Soft
Many of our modern youths are dilettantes, flitting about from one job to another, sampling it for a few weeks, and then quitting because they feel it is a waste of time to work until they have been psycho-analyzed or have gone through a vocational guidance examination. It isn't altogether the fault of our young people. They don't have enough horse sense. Our colleges fill them full of beautiful theories. A college professor of economics, earning maybe $3,000 per year tells them how to run a big business. If this economist knew how to do it so well, do you suppose he'd remain on a $3,000 per year salary when he could actually go out into the business world and make ten times that sum?

An English professor, who never has sold a dime's worth of poetry, prose, short stories or even greeting card verse, expounds very learnedly about writing salable copy.

In my own field we have scores of nitwit psychologists who can't make a speech, write a salable story, or piece of acceptable advertising copy. They hem and haw when delivering a public address or trembling in nervous fright and embarrassment. They couldn't sell snowballs to Eskimos. They are, themselves, victims of neuroses and tics, or of divorce, and social maladjustment.

Taunting The Teachers
Obviously, I am taunting many college teachers, hoping to rouse some of these second-raters from their smug complacency. Students graduating from such men are doubtless the sort who lost the following job:

Some months ago the trade magazine called "Hat Life" wanted to add a college man to its editorial department. The editor interviewed 14 young men for the job. Of these there were 6 who didn't even wear a hat!

A man with horse sense would at least have borrowed a hat when applying for a job on a magazine devoted to stimulating more hat business in America.

Since the liberal arts colleges certainly don't contribute much to your child's horse sense, please try to give him some before he leaves home.

Dr. Crane will give personal attention to questions on psychological problems. Write him in care of this newspaper, enclosing a 3-cent stamp, addressed envelope for reply. Letters and readers' names are never published.

My Neighbor Says—

Don't drown your dahlias. Many gardeners injure their dahlia plants by giving them too much water. Keep them well cultivated, but apply moisture only if they show signs of wilting. Then give them enough to penetrate the soil for six or eight inches at one time. If your dahlias are in a windy situation, they are likely to need staking. This work is best done before the plants get too tall or begin to bloom. While the plants do not require very much feeding, while growing, the use of a balanced commercial fertilizer when blossoming begins will increase both the number and the size of the blooms.

Sprinkle ground cinnamon over rice to dress up the dish for the youngster who hasn't any appetite. Add whole cinnamon to cereal while it is cooking.

Split hard rolls. Butter and then stuff them with chicken fish salad.

Thoughtless Parent Often Causes Injustice to Child

BY ANGELO PATRI

Children have a keen sense of justice. They will accept punishment when they know they merited it, brought it on themselves, asked for it, as they would put it. But they rebel at injustice; too often they have something to rebel against, and that at the hands of those who should be first in their defense.

One little girl, faithful to every duty at home, in school, in church, saved pennies out of her allowance of thirty-five cents a week to buy a game she wanted. It was a perfectly good game, one of the best of its kind and one that nobody could truly disapprove of. Imagine then the child's amazement when her father took the game from her and said it was unfit for her. It was only fit for a baby, a matter of fact it would call for the keenest kind of thinking and would take all the power of that sort any high school student had to offer.

Another good father, and I mean good in the sense of being dutiful, was unjust in depriving his daughter of a great pleasure, humiliating her in the eyes of her friends into the bargain. She was graduating and some of her friends, old family friends at that, gave a party in her honor. Her father would not allow her to go. Why? Because she had balked at going to singing class the afternoon before. She had gone under protest, but her father thought she ought to be punished for protesting and that is the way he took.

Another parent, this time a mother, took the heart out of her daughter by breaking a long-time promise. This child had been promised a new dress and permission to play before an audience if she did well in her music. She did so well that she won the medal and a scholarship. But her mother would not let her have the new dress, nor would she allow her to play before the important audience. Why? It might make her too conceited.

Now ask you what is a child to do with a parent like that? I hope they are few and far between. Injustice to children is all too common. Most of it is caused by thoughtlessness, want of time, weariness or impatience. That does not help the victims any. One ought to try a little harder to consider the helplessness of children under injustice and exert oneself a bit to avoid making life that much harder for them than it is naturally.

The willing child is worked to the limit while the lazy one goes free; the favored child gets what he wants at the expense of the less favored one. The noisy, persistent one is attended to first, satisfied first, at the expense of the quieter, less aggressive member of the family. Promises are broken because it would be a bit of trouble to keep them. Rights are overlooked because it would be inconvenient to recognize them. Feelings are wounded because selfishness makes it convenient and easy. Always the helpless children suffer. Always they rebel inwardly if they must, openly when they can.

It is ill to rear a child in a rebellious spirit. The surest way to achieve that bitter end is the unjust way.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

The Home Gardener

By Edwin R. Perkins

The use of acid reacting fertilizers and the elimination of animal manures from lawn feeding are best methods to produce weed-free lawns, yet, despite all our care, annual and perennial weeds will appear under the best of lawn care.

Keeping the lawn closely clipped will rid it of annual weeds. Clipping twice a week prevents the formation of seed heads and in a year or two annual weeds will be completely eliminated. Perennial weeds such as dandelion and plantain are more difficult to eradicate. If they are not too numerous, pulling the weeds out by hand may eliminate them entirely.

One of the most successful sprays against these perennial weeds is made by dissolving 1½ pounds of iron sulphate in one gallon of water. Apply this spray to the weeds and see that a good dose is given to well-established plants. Repeat the operation every two weeks during the growing season on all weeds which appear.

Spray iron sulphate solution with great care. See that none gets on your clothing, buildings or painted garden-wear since it leaves an almost indelible stain.

TWO AGAINST LOVE

by Frances Hanna

Chapter 31
Another Guest
ERE, slip my coat over your shoulders so you won't get cold," Tally commanded. "That fog is really as thick as pea soup!"

As they walked around the outside of the house she longed to tell him she was sorry, yet the words would not come. For all his kindness she felt his aloofness, his resentment. She wanted him to take her in his arms and kiss her and break down, wordlessly and emotionally, the barrier between them; but he kept the conversation casual and made no move to touch her.

Coming from her side of the house into Tally's was like stepping from one world into another. The family was gathered about the kitchen table while Mrs. Mack buttered bread and stacked sandwiches on the shelf below the cupboard.

Nola, without looking up from her cards, reached for Tally's hand and held it lovingly. "I thought you must be lost in the fog, darling," she laughed. "Where have you been, anyhow?"

"After company. I brought Jocelyn over to the feast."

Nola looked up. "Oh—hello, Lyn. She is not pleased to have me here, Jocelyn thought. She must love Tally terribly."

Bob threw down his last card and added the score.

"Gramp and Nola licked the tar out of us!" he grinned ruefully. "How about private lessons, Gramp?"

"No siren" the old man cackled. "Think I want to get beat?"

Nola stood up. "I'm going to bed," she announced, yawning. "I'm tired. No, don't coax me into staying. I don't want any more weight on this streamlined figure of mine! Lyn can have my share of sandwiches. Walk around the house with me, Bob!"

Gramp caught Jocelyn's eye as the two went out the door. He winked at her as if to say, "You got her on the run, Josie! Now's your chance!"

Tally frowned, obviously disconcerted by Nola's change of mind. However, he brought in a comfortable chair from another room for Jocelyn and teased Gramp to tell them stories.

Jocelyn found herself laughing with the others at the old man's fanciful tales, illustrated with violent gestures. Time raced on swift wheels to the moment when Mrs. Mack declared they should all be in bed. They called "Good night" in unison as Bob started taking her home, saying that "Thorn had arrived as he left Nola."

Jocelyn crawled into bed, feeling more lonely than ever; more helpless. Tally had been so sweet to come to her tonight, but she could not consider his concern as personal. It was just... just a sort of decent solicitude for a member of the so-called weaker sex. It was Nola he wanted... Nola he loved.

Synonyms For Living
Very early the next morning Jocelyn was awakened by the gay sound of Nola's voice calling from the window in the room next to hers. Curious, she reached for her flannel robe on the foot of the bed, drew it around her and pecked out from behind the curtain. Tally stood on the terrace below clad in boots and riding breeches, his wool short open at the neck. His head was thrown back as he looked up at Nola and his strong white teeth gleamed against his tanned skin. "Hurry up, sleepy-head!" he urged. "The horses are waiting, the sun is shining, and it's a glorious morning!"

"Count to five," she returned. "And not too fast!"

Then Jocelyn, still watching, saw Nola, slim and poised and smart in a gray riding habit, run out to him. They went off together, hand in hand, smiling eagerly into each other's faces, their laughing voices drifting back to the unhappy girl at the window.

Creeping back into bed, robe and slippers still on, she huddled into a miserable bundle. It would be very satisfactory, she reflected, if she could just blame someone else for her misfortune. It would also be nice if she permitted herself the solace of self-pity. However, if the loss of both love and money had done nothing else, it had disclosed, to her at least, an inner courage and fortitude she had not dreamed she possessed. Perhaps, after all, she was not so different from Grandmother Jocelyn. It must require a great deal of courage and fortitude to live one's life to the end with a man one did not love, to carry on with neat high and spirit undaunted. But... she didn't want to live her life that way. She wanted Tally now and forever!

Was it not inconsistent, she considered, how one's sense of values could become completely reversed so less than a year's time? For now the words, "Family, Tradition, Background, Social Standing, were merely hollow, empty words, not a bit comforting, while Love, Laughter, Giving, Sharing, were not merely words... they were synonyms for Living! Strange that Nola, with a background even more traditional, more rigid, more fabulous than her own, should have intuitively known enough to select these synonyms for living and discarded all others.

'Collusion'
The raucous call of an automobile horn from the driveway disrupted her introspective mood. Disrupted it effectively. It was Geoffrey's horn.

Once more she hopped out of bed and ran to the window. Geoffrey was standing on the running-board of his roadster with his back to her. He was lifting a large pigskin suitcase from the rumble seat and transferring it to the ground.

Jocelyn snatched slacks and sweater from the clothes closet and dressed hurriedly, nearly forgetting, in her displeasure, to wash and powder her face and comb her tangled hair.

They reached the side entrance simultaneously.

"Thorn told me you're running a hot line," Geoff stated. "I want a room and bath."

"It sounds like collusion. I'd rather—"

SATURDAY TALK

When I was about 19 years old, an event took place which made me feel sorry afterward. It was my fault, but I had no idea about it beforehand. This is how it happened:

I was riding one night on a day coach, which did not have many people in it. After I boarded it, rather tired and sleepy, I sat down in one of those wide old-fashioned seats which swing back and forth when you push them. They still are in use on many trains.

Wishing to make myself comfortable by using two of the double seats, instead of one, I looked ahead of me and found the seat vacant -- at least it looked that way.

Instead of standing up to push the seat over, I shoved against it while I stayed in my seat. It seemed to be stuck, so I shoved harder.

That moved the seat, but I heard a noise, and hardly a second later a sailor in uniform picked himself off the floor! He had been curled up on the seat which had seemed vacant!

Of course I told the sailor I was sorry, and hadn't known he was on the seat. As quickly as I could, I put the back of the seat where it had been before and the sailor lay down on it again.

If, by any chance, that sailor reads these words, I hope he will know I still am a little worried over what happened. I'd never want to treat a fellow traveler in such a way! Ever since, I've been extremely careful to look at the seat back of it when I've made a change of the kind!

Perhaps not many persons have had such a thing happen to them, but you may remember times when you have hurt someone's feelings without meaning to do so. Probably your feelings have been hurt by others in the same way.

I would not have blamed the sailor if he had grown hot with anger, but instead of that, he acted in a sensible way. He didn't like it, of course, but he must have figured out how it happened.

All of us can take more care about what we do. We can also allow for the fact that "the other fellow" most likely has no wish to do us harm in any way.

For Comfort It's Berliner Beer in Summer Weather

Call to Sam Mader at 3029 Will Bring
Quick Delivery

With Old Sol becoming more assertive daily, making each day a little warmer than the preceding one, the word, "comfort," holds a great deal of meaning to most everyone. Adding to the well-being of family and guests at this time of year necessitates concern for their comfort. Beverages which are refreshing, are of course the welcome solution to this problem. Particularly invigorating and truly refreshing, a warm weather pick-up-upper, as friends describe it, is Berliner, the popular Wisconsin brew. The general stimulating effect of Berliner beer in addition to its special tastiness has made it not only sectionally popular but an acceptable and dependable beverage for all occasions the year-round.

A suggestion from Sam Mader, local Berliner distributor, is pointed to picnickers and private or public outdoor party groups over the holidays is to include Berliner beer on the "must" list when planning refreshments for any of the outdoor gatherings. Be sure, too, Mader continues, to keep Berliner on ice at home ready to treat fam-

A Million Miles Without Mishap, Goal of Drivers

Bubolz Explains Methods
Of Avoiding Most
Accidents

"A million miles without an accident should be the goal of every motorist," is the advice of Gordon A. Bubolz, Secretary of Home Mutual Casualty Company. "Yes, there are few persons who have driven a million miles without an accident," says Mr. Bubolz. Such is the record of E. M. Williams, Monroe, Georgia, bridge contractor and president of a mutual insurance company. Mr. Williams' motto is: "Let the other fellow take the chances." While building safe bridges is Mr. Williams' business, he also believes, like the engineer, that one who operates a motor vehicle should practice safety, for safe bridges without safe drivers is an unhappy combination and will never solve our accident problem.

"Mr. Williams didn't just happen to be lucky. Driving an automobile is no monkey business with him. He runs no unnecessary risks. Ask him how to drive a million miles safely and you will get these, or similar answers: (1) Never depend on the other fellow to be safe—be safe yourself. (2) Give the right of way to the other fellow, even though he may be dead wrong. (3) Keep your eyes to the front and on the road all the time—don't gab with occupants in the rear seat. (4) Be on the lookout at every cross road; never pass a car at an intersection, or at a farmer's driveway, nor around a curve. (5) Always, and without fail, be on the lookout for approaching trains at all railroad crossings. (6) Look before backing your car—maybe a child is there. (7) Don't let care-free, energetic youth take your car on pleasure trips unless it is in charge of a responsible person. A disproportionate number of serious accidents are caused by persons between the ages of 16 and 24.

"A million miles without an accident" should be the ambition of every driver. Every passenger, also, owes it to himself to refuse transportation from one who does not respect his safety and the safety of others. Since persons who travel a million miles without an accident are in the minority, the need for insurance in a dependable company to relieve you of worry is an indispensable necessity. Protection in the Home Mutual Casualty Company, located in the Zuelke Building, is available at a nominal cost. Remember, you can not buy insurance after the horse is stolen, nor can you obtain it after the accident has occurred. Telephone 4600 before it is too late."

Many people are taking advantage of the attractions offered this year in the travel field at new low prices, according to the Erbach Travel Service, 128 N. Oneida street. Both the San Francisco exposition and the New York World's Fair, are proving exceptionally popular.

The railroads and bus lines, the travel service points out, are offering unusually low rates to New York in order to make it possible for every prospective traveler to visit the fair. Contrary to general belief, prices at the New York World's fair are not exorbitant. According to a recent bulletin, hamburgers are selling at 10 cents and complete dinners for as low as 50 cents. Worthily of mention too, is the fact that the fair is also offering many free attractions, making it possible for visitors to spend several days at the fair at no cost whatever except the admission ticket which is 75 cents.

Many of the visitors to New York are also taking advantage of the special cruises being offered by the various steamship lines this summer. Short week-end cruises are offered at $25.00 and up to Bermuda, West Indies, Nova Scotia and points in vicinity.

Whether travelling by bus, railroad, airplane, or driving a car, it is suggested too, that advance reservations be made at hotels for sightseeing trips of any kind throughout the city. All arrangements can be made in advance.

Summer represents the most ideal and convenient season for painting and wall papering, points out the William Nehls Wallpaper and Paint firm, 224 W. Washington street. Weather conditions, this firm explains, are by far the most consistent at this time of year, thus enabling the job to be done with fewer interruptions.

A vacation for the entire household membership is possible this summer by changing the color scheme of home surroundings. This can be done easily, Nehls continues, by brightening up the interior of the house with tastefully tinted walls or by the application of beautiful, new wallpaper selected from Nehls' unusually large stock of excellent washable patterns. The exterior of the house, too, may also be cheerfully improved through application of a coat or two of Nehls quality line of Moore paint. The cost is surprisingly low, with the average six-room house requiring only six gallons of exterior paint for a two-coat job.

The use of cool colors for present seemingly warm rooms and the application of warm colors for present cold rooms, light colors for small or dark rooms, and stimulating, restful colors of all varieties are to be found in the wallpaper patterns stocked by Nehls or created from the wide selection of color made possible from the large stock of high quality paints. Whatever the necessity or choice, with wallpaper or paints, a new beauty and cheerfulness in any home can be created, Nehls believes, through tasteful selection and artistic application.

Whether one or more of those suggestions are carried out or none at all, Nehls invite investigation of its interior and exterior decorating services. Cost estimates for any job, large or small, are given freely and without obligation. The telephone number is 452 if telephoning for this information is more convenient.

The most disastrous forest fire in U. S. history occurred in Wisconsin in 1871, burning 1,280,000 acres and claiming 1,500 lives.

ily or guests with a cool, refreshing, satisfying beer.

The many fine qualities and delicious taste of Berliner, the distributor feels, will relieve any doubt after a single try of the superiority of Berliner beer. The local distributor can be reached by phoning 3029. Prompt tavern and home delivery service is available.

Stopovers enroute include such points of interest as Niagara Falls, and Detroit, with some people including a trip on the Great Lakes either enroute or returning from New York.

PRISON REPEATERS

McAlester, Okla. Of the 335 "repeaters," 220 had served previous terms at McAlester but only 19 of the 220 had studied in the prison school.

Guard Children From Needless Pain July Fourth

Employers Mutuals Executive Points to Fireworks Menace

BY FRED W. BRAUN,
Vice President and Chief Safety
Engineer Employers Mutual
Liability Insurance Company

Why not satisfy your love of the spectacular this year by attending public fireworks exhibits instead of exposing your children to the cruelly unnecessary hazard of fireworks handled at home. Scores of persons are killed each year as the result of fireworks accidents and thousands are injured, and the pathetic part of it is, most of the victims are children.

Last year thirteen of those killed, and eight hundred and seventeen of those injured were children of ages between one and ten years. These boys and girls probably did not even know what they were celebrating or why. Of all types of preventable accidents, fireworks claim a larger percentage of younger children than any other.

It is senseless and unnecessary for children to be permitted to endanger their lives with fireworks and matches, the same as it would be to permit them to have any other dangerous instrument with which to amuse themselves.

Authorities say that even the so-called "harmless sparkler," which is frequently recommended for use in the home and by small children, can be deadly. Sparklers caused 90 casualties in one year, including four deaths. Parents should not only keep fireworks away from their children, but also keep their children away from fireworks in the hands of others, for accidents happen to those who are mere spectators, as well as to the children who play with the explosive materials.

Appleton has banned the sale of fireworks, but families who go away for the holiday may very likely have access to them. Consequently, don't let the children have fireworks and keep them away from other children who have them. Substitute something else: fishing, picnics, public exhibits, but let them be alive and happy on the fifth!

Derive More From Summer; Learn to Play Instrument

Van Zeeland Makes Instruction Pleasant
And Economical

Pleasant summer days can also be wasted days if youngsters fail to devote a part of their time to constructive, pleasant activity, besides the Van Zeeland Music Co., 128 N. Appleton street. Studies will come easier next fall, moreover, if brother and sister have learned to apply themselves to mastering a musical instrument during the summer.

Watch the average young person trying, more or less successfully, to do something besides play baseball, go fishing, swim, or read. There is a lot of energy going to waste during periods like these, energy that might well be used to develop the musical ability that is inherent in 99 out of 100 children.

Knowing that summer has a relaxing effect on parental pocket-books—since school clothes and school supplies do not have to be purchased—Van Zeeland arranged for competent instruction at low cost, with no obligations to purchase an instrument. Thus, a child's musical aptitude may easily be determined, and the instrument best suited to him selected most accurately.

Musical instruction, however, is confined to no particular age bracket. As a matter of fact, any person who can whistle or hum a tune has the makings of a musician, and there is no greater pleasure to be had from music than the maker himself gets out of it. Van Zeeland's list of satisfied, successful people covers practically all ages.

Possibly a visit to the Van Zeeland headquarters—fully equipped and spacious—is the best idea. A telephone call to 1650 will bring a representative to the home
